Hard Work Gets It.

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

WHEN this was written, yesterday, wise men in Houston expected Governor Smith to be nominated by acclamation and with much enthusiasm on the first ballot, and Senator Robinson of Arkansas to be nominated, also on one ballot, for vice president.

LUDWIG, the eminent German writer, spent an afternoon with John D. Rockefeller and will tell the world about him. Mr. Rockefeller said to him: "Look, I have done everything I have done by being quiet. When I was young I only needed to put the right people in the right job."

Industrialists say there are not enough men for the big positions. That is true. Also, there are not enough big industrialists that know the right man for the big position when they see him. The man is usually right under their noses.

IN the South everything is courtesy. Bootleggers at Houston apologized through a local newspaper, expressing sorrow at being compelled to raise prices. They had no idea how thirsty the crowd would be, and found themselves on Monday with only 3,000 cases —30,000 bottles—of whisky and only casual assistance from local stills. Under the circumstances they were obliged to raise prices. "Laws of supply and demand," they said.

It seems unnecessary for Democrats to demand an end of prohibition.

HARD work gets it. There is no royal road to success."

That was Governor Al Smith's message to the graduating class of the parochial high school of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, of which his 18-year-old boy is president. The active Governor Smith gave the boys is needed by many would-be "get-rich-quick" moderns, old and young.

GOVERNOR SMITH advised the boys to benefit by their education and appreciate an advantage that he never had.

He told them that when other men talked about their college degrees—B. A., Ph. D., etc.—he told them his letters were F. F. M., standing for "Fulton Fish Market," where he worked as a lad.

Governor Smith's early experiences in hard work will enable him to appeal to many men in his campaign that would not be reached by a "Ph. D."

"CALL MONEY," the kind used for stock gambling, cost seven per cent yesterday. Somebody wants to discourage gambling foolishness. But even seven per cent money and calling $30,000,000 by the banks did not discourage Wall Street. Stock sales have dropped to "only" something over 2,000,000 shares. But prices hold and rise.

If you own a stock exchange seat, don't be in a hurry to sell it. You will see many 5,000,000 share days.

A GIRL, 22 years old, narrowly escaped death when two men threw her from a swiftly moving automobile. She told police the men threw her out when she "resented their remarks."

Other young women should profit by the warning, "not to accept invitations from unknown gentlemen."

THE Democratic platform is expected to ignore the League of Nations absolutely. That's as wise as it would be to ignore Tut-Ankh-Amen—both are dead.

Besides, on one occasion, when Democrats took the league to their bosoms and Republicans wisely went the other way, the result was 7,000,000 plurality against the league.

That should convince the Democratic platform writers. There is no accident about 7,000,000 plurality.

IN the jungle wild animals take their own photographs, but don't know what a flashlight means. Patrolman placed a camera in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church near the poor box, arranged so that Charles Calian, when he stole $12.86 from the box, took his own photograph, rang a bell that brought the police and generally caused his undoing. After seeing the photograph he confessed.

PLANS AIRPORT

Columbus Takes Steps to Acquire Field; to Make Survey

Chicago, 27—First definite steps toward the erection of an airport in Columbus were taken by the City Airport Commission late Tuesday afternoon.

The commission is planning to survey the city from the air later this week to ascertain suitable sites for the port. Investigation of costs, facilities and possibilities of financing the project are being made by the commission.

Following the announcement that the Transcontinental Air Transport Co. had decided upon Columbus as its eastern terminal of the air route, the commission is making a study of the facilities and costs of providing this the Buick

TOLEDOAN SHOT FROM WINDOW, MAHAFFEY HELD

VICTIM WILL RECOVER

No Charges Placed Against Mahaffey; Quigley Receives Six Wounds

Raymond Quigley of Toledo is in City hospital in a critical condition from five bullet wounds in his right leg and one in his right hand and John Mahaffey, former Erie railroad detective, is locked up at police headquarters for investigation, as the result of a shooting at the Mahaffey home, 541 Pearl-st, at 10 o'clock last night.

According to the story told the police by Mrs. Mahaffey who was recently divorced from Mahaffey, she and Quigley and her 12-year-old daughter had just returned from an automobile ride and Quigley had seated himself on a davenport in the living room when, without warning, someone began shooting through a window and Quigley dropped to the floor.

Taken to Hospital

Frantic from fear Mrs. Mahaffey called a physician and also the police. Quigley was taken to City hospital where it was discovered that five bullets had lodged in his right leg from the hip to the ankle and a sixth had gone through his right hand.

Because of things he had allegedly said and done since being divorced from his wife, suspicions immediately rested on Mahaffey and a search was started by the police which resulted in his arrest on East Center-st at 12:30 o'clock this morning. He was unarmed when arrested and offered no resistance and was locked up at headquarters for investigation.

Recall Recent Trouble

Aside from the statement that he had every reason to believe the shooting had been done by her divorced husband, Mrs. Mahaffey refused to discuss the case this morning. It was learned from the police, however, that some one, believed by them to have been Mahaffey, had thrown a brick threw the window at

CALL LOAN RECORD BROKEN ON MARKET

Tightness In Money District Sends Rate to 7 1-2 Per Cent

New York, June 27—Another seven-year record in the financial district was broken today when the call money rate moved upward to 7½ per cent, for the first time since June 7, 1921, when call money ruled at that rate. Today's 7 per cent Renewal rate was also the breaking of a seven-years' record.

Tightness in the money market is due to the approaching July disbursements for interest and dividends, also to "window dressing" by the banks for the comptroller's June 30 report of financial condition.

KEROSENE BLAST CLAIMS MOTHER OF FIVE CHILDREN

Chillicothe, June 27—A mother of five children, Mrs. Orville Abney, 30, Bainbridge, is dead here today from burns received when kerosene, which she was using to start a fire exploded late yesterday.

A neighbor, hearing screams, arrived to smother the flames, saving the life of a 5-months old baby, whose clothing had caught fire when the liquid exploded. First-aid was given the mother but proved unavailing. Windows of the house were blown out by the force of the explosion.

POLICEMAN HURT

Columbus, June 27— Patrolman E. N. Davidson, of the city police force is in a hospital today with bruises and possible internal injuries suffered last night when he fell into the draining pit of an oil station here while patrolling his beat, according to a police report.

AMERICA'S SWEETHEART GROWS UP

IN CURLS!—It was these golden tresses that first won fame for Mary Pickford, the darling of the movies. But her hair had grown so heavy that its weight began to cause headaches, and now she has had it cut short.

BOBBED!—When Mary and Doug left for the West, the former wore her hat well over her ears to hide her new fashionable bob. So a staff artist for International Illustrated News took pen in hand and snipped the curls off Mary's photo just to show you how different she will look.

CALVARY TAKES LEAGUE LEAD

May Force Yanks To Trade

Larry and Reese Expected To Be Sent to Another Club

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, June 27—Gossip, the undefeated sprint champion at all weights and ages, mounted a dark horse and rode down the backstairs today with the story that American League pressure may be exerted, under cover, to have the Yankees pass along Larry and Reese coast infield stars, to another club "for the good of the game." They are alleged to have cost the Yanks $125,000 for 1929 delivery, which might make any proposal that they be sold, traded or given away with coupons sound slightly falsetto. Yet a certain American League manager is authority for the statement that he "understands" the idea has been "seriously considered."

It has distinct possibilities, as a matter of fact. In the first place, the American League affair virtually has become "no contest" again and the league can't afford a further repetition in 1929. In the second place, the Yanks don't figure to need Larry and Reese any more than they need somebody to go up there and bash one for Ruth. In the third place, it is the writer's impression that the coast league investment was made mostly with the idea of closing a trade for a pitcher or two in 1929.

The outfits that should be interested are the Cleveland Indians, the Boston Red Sox and the Chicago White Sox. All three might be ready to sacrifice some of their pitching for a capable second base duo.

It may be an item of interest, however, that the coast pair has pulled up somewhat club-footed this season. Notoriety seems to have spoiled them.

Good or bad, you can bet the week's baloney that no potential contender will get them and that eliminates the Athletics and Senators automatically, even if they wanted them, which probably they don't. The Tiger and Browns seem to be well set around second base, too, but the Indians, White Sox and Red Sox must do something about their infields or resign themselves to the business of going nowhere at a frightful clip.

BROOKLYN DODGERS LEAP TO THIRD PLACE

Pass Reds and Cubs in Standing by Winning Doubleheader

New York, June 27—Four of the National League teams are bunched so closely that the fast-stepping Brooklyn Dodgers were able to jump all the way from fifth to third place by beating Boston twice yesterday, 5 to 1 and 6 to 5. In stretching their winning streak to six straight games, Uncle Wilbert Robinson's nephews passed Cincinnati and Chicago and advanced to within one game of the second place Giants.

The Giants outslugged the Phillies again, 7 to 6, sweeping the series, and are now only five games behind the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals. Don Hurst, the Phils' rookie first baseman, hit his tenth homer.

Three Tens

The big league pitchers are thriving on the hot weather. Grady Adkins, Shreveport rookie with the White Sox, held the Detroit Tigers to three hits and beat them 5 to 2. Milt Gaston of Washington also yielded three hits against the Athletics and won a brilliant 4 to 1 duel from Ed Rommel with the aid of two home runs by Outfielder Barnes. Burleigh Grimes, registering his eleventh victory of the season, limited the Cubs to four hits and batted in the only score of the game, but Chicago won the second game from the Pirates by a 7 to 3 score.

Larry Bettencourt clouted a homer with the bases full against Cleveland, the Browns winning 6 to 3.

The Athletics, staggering under three straight defeats by Washington, are in poor shape for the allegedly crucial series with the Yankees starting today. The Mackmen are 10 games behind the champions.

At New York: Pierre Charles, Belgian heavyweight, won decision from Napoleon Jack Dorval, of Emporium Pa. (10).

The race in Sunday School League No. 1 took on a different light today following the victory of Calvary, city champions of last year, over St. Mary's in the only contest played. The score was 8 to 3.

By virtue of their victory, Calvary took over the leadership of the league after a speedy rise during the last half of the first round. Previous to last night's game the leaders were tied for first place with Christians No. 1.

The rise of Calvary to the top of the league has been equaled by the drop of the Saints to first place in the second division. At the start of the season, the Irish won three straight games only to turn around and lose a like number.

Last night's victory was sweet music to the ears of the champions who gained revenge for the defeat handed them by St. Mary's earlier in the season. This game was the only defeat to be marked up against Calvary.

Nicking Messenger for three runs in the first inning, the Saints were held scoreless for the balance of the game by Gruber who took over the pitching position.

Four home runs accounting for five tallies were scored in the fray. The fifth inning was the big frame for the victors with three runs coming in.

Tonight postponed games in Sunday School League No. 1 will be played. In this game Calvary will face tough opposition in Wesley.

Rickard May Purchase Giants Baseball Team

Houston, Tex., June 27—Tex Rickard, the celebrated punch and judy man, is about to complete a deal for the purchase of the New York Giants. He made this announcement here after lasting through a session of the Democratic Convention at the local hippodome.

"It is true that such a deal is on the tar," Tex told us, "and I would not be surprised if the announcement would be made any day. My interests have been dickering with the Stoneham people for some time and are almost ready to close."

Outside of this Rickard had nothing to say on the subject. He indicated he would relish operating the Giants because he might be able to stage a few of their personal battles in public and cash in on same.

The amount of money involved, stage or otherwise, was not divulged. In fact, the proposed transaction hasn't reached the ballyhoo stage yet and that probably is one reason for the reticence. When Tex Rickard hesitates to talk on a sport subject, my friends, you have seen T. Rickard in a strange mood.

The promoter is here trying to figure out how anyone can be so foolish as to allow 25,000 people to see anything, even the sunset, without paying for it. He is willing to blame it on the heat and let it go at that.

BY QUIN RAIL

WILL another former pitcher, following an example set by the Bam of Swat, Babe Ruth, prove to be the fair-haired boy among the circuit cloutors in the National League?

We're referring to Del Bissonette, the first sacker of the Brooklyn Robins. Bissonette's first monicker is Delphia but that isn't being held against him by the fans so long as he continues to pepper the onion.

Del was born up in the north woods of Winthrop, Me., and he has stuck to his idea of making a success in baseball as assiduously as the entries in Mr. C. C. Pyle's recent Bunion Derby. That's probably why today he is being pointed out as one of the wows of the present season.

Back in his school days Del dreamed of being a pitcher. Ruth was hitting the apple for the circuit, but he wasn't drawing down the healthy pay checks and the big coin seemed to be going to the moundsmen. The kid up in the north woods craved fame, but he also liked to think of it sprinkled with dollar marks.

So in his initial diamond bow at New Hampshire State, later at Georgetown and still later with industrial leagues around Montreal we find young Bissonette taking his turn on the hill.

Some mutual friends sent him to This Speaker, then managing the Indians, in the Spring of 1921. He hurt his arm in training and the Cleveland pilot set him to Boss-setter Reese, who told him his arm would be all right after a rest. However, he failed to show Speaker anything which might lead to the belief that he would become a star twirler in fast company, and so, in July, Del was set adrift and returned to Maine, where he played semi-pro ball around the sand lots near his home town.

Having pitched a couple of good games in 1923 he again reported to Speaker, seeking another try under the expansive canvas. The Cleveland management still continued to be unimpressed by his efforts and it was then that he decided that if he couldn't be a pitcher he'd take up the business of connecting with base wallops and moving his baseball ability from the hill over to the territory around the first station. He whanged his way into a first base job with York, in the New York State League, but again failed to make any large sized impression and took up his toils at Binghamton.

He went back to York in 1925. At the close of the season York was in a tie for the pennant and in the final game Del knocked the ball out of the park with the bases clogged and that wallop not only won the pennant for York but gave Del his first try in the big show as a first baseman. Larry Sutton, Brooklyn's veteran scout, was in the bleachers during that game and grabbed the home-run hitter for the Robins.

Without being given much of a trial the Robins farmed him out the following spring to Jersey City, where the pitchers almost slow-balled him out of the league. But Del studied the dilatory delivery and eventually solved it and remained with Jersey. In 1927 Bissonette was again with the Robins in training at Clearwater, but again he failed to impress and was farmed out to Buffalo. In fact, he was offered to Buffalo for $6,000.

Fortunately for the Robins, Buffalo didn't buy him, for during last season he proved a sensation, hitting .365 and leading the league with 31 homers.

Now he is Brooklyn's regular first sacker with a great chance to lead the league in circuit drives and it's just another proof of what stick-to-itiveness will do. A lot of fellows would have given up and taken a job driving a truck, or something.

EAGLES TO PLAY DUSKY NINE HERE

Florida Cuban Giants Seeking Title of Homestead Grays; Team Has Many Colored Stars in Lineup; Positions To Be Changed

Claiming to be as great or greater than the famous Homestead Grays, the Florida Cuban Giants will play the Marion Eagles at Lincoln Park Sunday afternoon.

This colored aggregation boasts a collection of the best dusky stars of the sunny south having played together for many years. Their reputation for winning ball games is extremely good and up to June 11 had been defeated but three times in 22 starts.

O. G. Covert, business manager of the team, charges that the Homestead Grays have dodged his aggregation two years and all efforts to bring together have failed. This season Cuban team is following the around attempting to bring about series for the colored championship the world.

It is not likely that Sharrock will seen in left field for the Eagles in day's encounter. Manager Bacon probably pull him in to first. So this season harrock has been hi good although he is poor at cov the field.

Rowan is to be shifted to field with Glenn Price moving to Price's legs have been none too this season and he is unable to the middle garden with the speed days gone by.

Rizor may be seen back at Buckland, the regular Eagle sacker, is suffering from an in knee. He may be out of the for the balance of the season.

Kansas City, Mo., June 27—Al Espinosa, professional of the Illinois Golf Club, Chicago, today had considerably improved his standing in the golf world as a result of his smashing victory in the mid-America Open with a score of 289 for seventy-two holes, which is only one over par.

He led the field by five strokes, Archie Compston of England finishing second with 294.

Third and fourth prizes went to Jack Burke, of Houston, Texas, and Leo Diegel of White Plains, N. Y., who were tied for third place with 297. Fifth prize was won by Joe Kirkwood of Albany, Ga., who snagged a 298. Ed Dudley of Los Angeles was the only other entrant to break 300, Dudley got a 299.

Espinosa, to win the first prize of $1,500, had the remarkable rounds of 74-68-75-72 over the difficult Lakewood course averaging just one-fourth stroke over par to the round. He played consistent and brilliant golf all the way, driving hard and long off the tees, playing his irons magnificently and putting well on the difficult greens. Included in his gallery was Mrs. Espinosa.

Other famous golfers didn't do so well. Johnny Farrell, of Mamoroneck, N. Y., recent winner of the national open, turned in a 303, Walter Hagen, of New York, a 306 and Gene Sarazen, of Flushing, N. Y., a 309.

VACATION DAYS

Marion Residents Visit Many Points of Interest in Ohio on Outing Trips

Great Number of Local Tourists Trek Northward to Lake Erie Resorts; Points Near Bellefontaine Found Popular to Vacationists and Week-End Visitors

Many points of interest in Ohio have been designated by Mrs. D. V. Gallagher, secretary of the Marion Auto Club, where Marion residents spend a majority of their vacations and week-end sojourns.

ROMANCE, BEAUTY REMAINS IN WEST

Mystery and Hardships Gone from Rocky Mountain Regions

The southwestern region of the United States was formerly a land of mystery, romance and, incidentally too, of many hardships. Today, the romance and beauty remains. In these southwestern Rockies are high mountains, vast plains, titanic canyons, great forests and many other natural scenic attractions.

The greatest of all of natural wonders is Grand Canyon National Park.

The Grand Canyon is a spectacular gorge over 200 miles in length, from nine to thirteen miles in width and in places more than a mile deep. It is really a series of canyons with a chain of mountains rising from the bottom, the mountains nearly a mile in height and with the Colorado River flowing through the bottom of the gorge at an altitude of approximately 2,600 feet.

It is beautifully colored and with every shifting shadow the coloring changes, each making it more beautiful than before. Grand Canyon National Park may be comfortably visited on the trip to Pacific Coast.

Even the optimist forgets to smile when the tax collector comes around.

People have widely different notions as to what constitutes a good time.

Marionites, Hunting Something New For Annual Trek, Will Be Able to Choose From Full Line of Supplies

Is it any wonder that people enjoy vacationing? Each year there's an added delight in finding something new in the way of clothing and equipment for the annual trek to distant shores and mountains.

This year the department stores are offering a full line of sporting togs for women. Those women who are adept at designing their own clothes, have been buying rajah and pongee, and light prints for their frocks, and those who are too busily engaged to ply the needle are buying dresses of the same materials ready made. A great many of the women who are buying light dresses are also buying cooler coats, or beach coats, as some prefer to call them, for protection from dust while driving, and to add a touch of color to their sporting costumes.

Bathing suits this year will give the wild waves something to talk about. Gayer than David's coat was ever designed, this very necessary part of a woman's vacation wardrobe is dotted, striped, plain, futuristically patterned, boyish, or feminine.

Looking to Complexion

The gay sportswoman who plans on taking her tennis racket, golf clubs, swimming suit, or fishing tackle along in the running board rack, is also looking to her complexion. Jars and jars of cold creams, bleaching lotions, and freckle creams are being bought at both the beauty counters in the department stores and at the drug stores.

Women will wear felt hats this summer to add the proper tone of chick to their costumes, and Deauville sandals, sandals of other designs, and a large number of linen slippers are being bought this season.

Gloves, silk leading, of course, as it always does in summer glove fabrics, and more white kids than are generally sold, have been purchased by those who want to "finish" their ensembles to the last minute detail. Brilliant scarfes, more colorful than ever before, clever new handkerchiefs, blocked or stitched and guaranteed not to fade, and purses, flat, underarm, or pouch, in printed silks, to match the dresses, or straw bags to match the sandals, are accessories which are making the local counters a delight to witness.

Gay Sweaters Along

Gay sweaters in light wools, or the new lacer-weave stitch with accordion pleated skirts to match, will also be found packed in the bags of many of those who are leaving town for the summer.

The kiddies who will accompany their parents on the annual journey will enjoy themselves to the fullest in the new play dresses of light cotton prints and in the khaki play suits. Many doctors are advising mothers of unhealthy children to buy the "sun suits" advertised in one of the stores. These little suits a mere combination of short trunks and straps crossed at the back are a wonderful asset in building up tiny bodies in need of plenty of good sunshine and air, doctors say. The average man on his vacation this year will wear knickers, most of the day, whether they're appropriate for all periods of the social day or not, and will include a sack suit, "roughing" clothes, a bathing suit, and if a hotel is listed on the route, a suit of clothes for the dining room or ballroom of a hotel. His hat, if he wears one, should be of the new turned down brim straws, and his shoes, if he wears other than the every-day oxford, will be either white buck trimmed with black calf, or Deauville sandals.

Basket Refrigerators

For the convenience of the women on the trips one hardware company in the city is offering basket refrigerators, with a capacity for five pounds of ice cracked to pieces about the size of a walnut. These new food-savers will refrigerate from 12 to 24 hours. An unbreakable gallon thermos jug, with a neck large enough so that sandwiches may be put in, will keep food hot 24 hours, or cold, 72 hours.

Many of the tourists and vacationists delight in cooking out-of-doors. This same company has a new style camp cook stove, built up so that baking may be done.

Of course the usual line of fishing tackle, and other sporting necessities is being shown. One new bait, the "Lunny Frog" is guaranteed as a "sure killer." Only practice will prove the truth of this boast.

Light, light fiction is going to be read by the happy-go-lucky travelers this season, and many are taking their portable talking machines along. Portfolios of writing materials in which to apprise the home folks of the pleasures of the trip, have vanished with great rapidity from the counters on which they are displayed.

And of course, the camera! Perhaps some of Marion's vacationers this summer will take moving picture making machines with them, and enjoy during the winter the same pleasures they indulged in during the warmer months.

Emergency Kit Handy

The people who are cautious will include an emergency kit from one of the drug stores in their bags. These handy little packets will slip easily into the corner of a trunk or suitcase, and will undoubtedly be used a great deal during the summer. They contain scissors, tweezers, a dropper, surgical plaster, iodine, safety pins, sterilized gauze, automatic ammonia, picric acid gauze for burns and gauze bandage in many widths. Mosquito and poison ivy lotions will come in handy to those who will camp out.

And where will all of this be carried? In the new trunks, in high colors, roomy enough for vacation necessities or the new square hat boxes equipped with folding hangers in the lid, a small compartment for several pairs of shoes, and space for a hat. Some of the new overnight bags carry their fittings packed closely against the lid. Of course bathing suits will be taken in the new hand-painted leatherette bathing bags.

A great many of the families will make their bumper trunks, side racks, and convenient hand bags, answer the purpose for luggage storing.

Certainly, people in Marion never had a more complete, or cleaner, newer line of vacation supplies to choose from as they have this year.

West Virginia Setting Good Example in Constructing Roads to Interest Points

Department of Agriculture Busily Engaged in Spreading Information to Lure Vacation Tourist; State's Features Within Hop-Skip-and-Jump of Marion

Down in West Virginia they've built some new and splendid highways and the state's Department of Agriculture is busily engaged in spreading information which will lure the vacation tourist. It's a good movement and a fine display of enterprise on the part of the state's official family. Moreover, it ought to be an excellent example to other states, including Ohio, to promote touring to points of interest.

Many of these West Virginia points of interests are within a hop-skip-and-jump of Marion, with good roads southbound through Ohio to reach them. Thus a trip to the neighboring state may easily be recommended.

At Parkersburg there are things to be seen—an electric porcelain plant and a shovel plant, two of the largest of their kind in the world—a great rayon plant, stadium, parks and playgrounds. But of historic interest there is, just south of Parkersburg, in the Ohio river, Blennerhassett Island. Here once stood the palatial mansion of Harmon Blennerhassett where Aaron Burr and many other notables of the time paid frequent visits. High waters and fire have long since destroyed the stately old mansion.

Charleston, the capitol of the state, has two new government buildings under construction. Industrially, Charleston is an unusually busy little city. Here are located the largest axe factory and the largest sheet glass plant in the world. The huge armor plate plant in South Charleston, built during the war, represents a government outlay of a hundred million dollars. Historically, Charleston goes back to the Indian fighting days and to the surveys of Washington in the Kanawha Valley.

Point Pleasant, another historic Ohio river town, grew up around a pioneer fort and Indians outpost. Here in 1774, General Lewis defeated the Shawnee Indians in what Congress and historical societies have accepted as the first battle of the Revolutionary war. The battlefield is marked by a shaft 82 feet high. Another monument marks the spot where the great Indian chief, Cornstalk, was killed a few years later. Near here also once stood the log cabin in which Daniel Boone kept stores in 1786. George Washington made surveys around Point Pleasant in 1870.

PREDICT MANY TOURS WEST THIS SUMMER

Travel to Pacific Coast in 1928 To Exceed That of Other Years

Travel to the Pacific coast in 1928, will exceed that of any other year, it is said, and linked with that travel will be an increasing disposition to see the entire Pacific coast. Residents of the Coast themselves are adding to coast-wise travel by steamship, train, and paved highway.

One reason for the increase in this travel, the entire length of the Coast, in so far as automobile journeys go, is the fact that the Pacific Highway, from Tia Juana, Mexico, to Vancouver, B. C., a distance of 1800 miles, is paved every mile of the way with the exception of seventy-five miles of excellent surfaced highway in northern California. Not once does the motorist's wheels touch dirt road when he gets on the Pacific Coast Highway in Oregon, Washington or British Columbia. The Pacific Highway is the longest stretch of paved highway in the world and no other road has such a diversity of scenery or such a group of interesting cities.

From San Francisco Bay district it is a 1,000 mile drive, or a comfortable three day trip to the Evergreen Playground of Puget Sound. The Redwood Highway from San Francisco to Grant's Pass, Oregon, one of the most remarkable highways in the world, offers an optional route north of San Francisco.

There is no difficulty in crossing the international boundary line into Canada. There is no tax, no bond, no undue formality.

CHICAGOANS MAKING READY FOR VACATION

Thousands Planning Trek for Annual Playtime by Rail and Auto

Twenty minutes in an auto will bring one within speaking distance of happy groups indulging in golf, others riding horseback, crowds playing baseball, a multitude enjoying the beaches still more out for a picnic in the open, sportsmen at gun practice—and within sight of every variety of power boat and sailing craft, from canoes to the big lake liners; myriads of others skimming along the boulevard and park with you in machines, one of a few airplanes dotting the sky—that is Chicago at summer play.

It is an outdoor city by day and at night the great ballrooms, motion picture palaces, theaters, restaurants and gardens and country cafes get a full quota helping themselves to a bit of vacation.

They are whetting their appetites for their annual playtime. Thousands upon thousands have started and planned their trek by rail, by auto, by boat and by airplane to the summer spots. Other thousands of summer visitors are on their way to Chicago, their idea of a resort.

Schools are either closed or closing, and everyday is "getting away" day for the vacation crowds. There's a rural spot within the reach of every purse in the great woods and lakes districts almost in Chicago's dooryard. Transportation makes the Rocky Mountains, the Pacific and the Atlantic coasts and the wilds of Canada near enough for thousands, and still others are planning a trip beyond the oceans. It's vacation time!

LEGENDS ADD SPIRIT TO WESTERN BEAUTY

Denver, as Gateway, Gives Tourist Glimpse of Mountain Ranges

The Indian and his legends, the prospector and his gold, the cattleman and his grazing grounds, the homesteader and his struggles, the descendants of all these building a new empire in a land that fought for its primitive solitudes—all these in a setting of scenery unequaled in the world, contribute to the romance and the interest of every trip a visitor can make and form an almost visible halo of sentiment around every peak of the Rockies.

Every gaping shaft-hole in a mountain side tells its own story of struggle and rejoicing or failure and heartbreak; deep-worn winding paths over the ranges tell a silent but eloquent tale of the migrations of the brown men who lived here little more than a generation ago—lived and loved, hunted and fought and finally lost their battle for existence to the white hordes that coveted their lands and swept them into far-off corners.

Tale of Accomplishments

Perhaps there was little enough romance in the old days to those who suffered inconvenience and endured hardship—but to the onlooker, who can vision Colorado and its mountain country as it was a short lifetime ago and who sees it now, seems a fairy tale of accomplishment.

Denver, the gateway—there one gets to glimpse the first of the high-flung ranges, fourteen miles away, where, in the early days, the Indian scouts watched for the slow-moving caravans whose coming spelt disaster for them and where they built the signal fires that called their allies to the attack and maybe massacre.

Now wide motor roads speed the visitor up into the hills, past the sites of long forgotten council fires. A great game preserve stretches where once the buffalo roamed and modern hotels snuggle among the peaks where the tepees used to hide. Scores of trips, long and short, radiate from beautiful Denver, but they all lead into the Land of Yesterday.

Sunlight and Shadow

Estes Park, Rocky Mountain National Park? Here, too, sunlight and shadow have their story, for this region of great scenic contrasts was dearly loved of the Utes and Arapahoes. They have left their language in the names of lakes and streams and their legends cling to every pass and peak.

Farther on range after range rises against the western sky, each with its story, each with its glory. No matter where one goes in the Colorado Rockies, legends lend an added interest to the beauty.

The chronic kicker is always disliked, but he gets more attention than the meek man.

"Big Tim" Murphy, Chicago Demi-Gangster, Politician, Killed In Machine-Gun-Fire

Labor Leader's Body Found in Front of Home Riddled With Bullets; Was Colorful Figure in Gangland

Chicago, June 27—"Big Tim" Murphy, labor leader, politician and racketeer de luxe, lay dead here today, a victim of machine gun bullets. Chicago's most picturesque demi-gangster was riddled with leaden slugs on the front lawn of his Rogers' Park home late last night after he had answered a mysterious summons to his front door.

When the deadly rat-tat-tat of the machine gun died awar the gangster assassins had barged their most important quarry since the dramatic shooting several years ago of Dion O'Bannion.

Murphy whose checkered career has perhaps been more colorful than any other of his kind, was listening in on the radio to the Democratic convention when his front door bell rang. With him was his brother-in-law, Harry Diggs.

Inveterate Ring of Bell

Remembering his gangland shooting, Murphy peered from a side door for a glimpse of the party who had rung his front door bell. He saw no one. Followed by Diggs, he stepped onto the lawn to investigate.

Simultaneously a large closed automobile rolled past the house. Before Murphy could retreat there was a spit of flame from the automobile accompanied by the crackling of a machine gun. "Big Tim" instinctively dropped to the ground, but the sweep of the death-dealing gun was lowered to rake the lawn. Murphy was trapped in the range of fire and his body riddled with bullets.

Diggs, who had leaped backward, escaped the hail of lead. As the death car sped away, after a full minute of firing, Diggs dragged the limp form of Murphy into the house. He was dead.

Search for Heitler

Five minutes after Chief of Detectives O'Connor had arrived on the scene, he ordered a search for "Mike De Pike" Heitler west side underworld character and notorious as an operator of gambling and vice resorts.

Heitler had been a constant companion of Murphy during the past few months according to Chief O'Connor.

Murphy is said to have been operating a palatial gambling resort on the north side but warfare in the cleaners and dyers' industry, in which "Big Tim" sought control, is believed to have brought about his death.

Disliked by Capone

Through his activities in the cleaners and dyers' war, Murphy is said to have incurred the enmity of "Scarface Al" Capone, who was taken into partnership with one of the city's largest cleaners for the purpose of "fighting gunmen with gunmen."

Diggs, the only known witness to the shooting was unable to furnish a close description of the car on account of semi-darkness. Neither could he say how many gangsters were in the death car.

Murphy was 42 years old. He lived with his wife and an adopted daughter in a fashionable section of Rogers' Park.

HARDING MEMORIAL ATTRACTS TOURISTS

Bad Weather Conditions Expected to Cut Down Automobile Trips

Despite the poor weather conditions, thousands of tourists from all parts of the United States continue to visit the Harding Memorial. Each day cars bearing license plates of all colors and the license numbers of nearly every state in the union, stop long enough to pay a tribute to the late president by visiting the memorial south of the city.

The unusually wet and cool summer has, however, curtailed touring to some extent, Mrs. D. V. Gallagher, secretary of the Marion Auto Club, said today. While tourists from all parts of the United States seek the services of the club in planning their routes from here, the number is not as great as in previous years when the weather was less wet and cool.

That the number of tourists will fall below that estimated earlier in the year, is the belief of auto club officials. The decrease being due to the unseasonable weather. Should the remainder of the summer prove to be brighter, it is probable that the number of tourists will increase in proportion.

Automobile club headquarters equipped with road maps of all states together with a mine of information regarding places of interest and hotel facilities, have proven of great value to tourists. That tourists are quick to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the club, is evident from the number who call at the local office each day seeking advice, as to the best and most attractive routes.

Tall, Blond Singer Sends Houston Gang Into Ecstacy

BY ROLAND KREBS
Star Staff Correspondent

CONVENTION HALL, Houston, Tex., June 27—There's considerable rum-running and devil-raising going on today in Houston and it's all the fault of a tall, majestic, beautiful blond girl—Miss Melvena Passmore.

Miss Passmore, formerly of the Boston, English and Chicago opera companies and a guest artist in the capitals of Europe, opened yesterday's session by singing "The Star Spangled Banner," "America" and then "Dixie." That started it. You'd never suspect, as you watched this stunning, dainty creature singing and smiling that she was kicking up such a row.

It was the first time Dixie had been sung here since the delegates began to gather. Houston hospitality played "The Sidewalks of New York," "The Saint Louis Blues," "Tammany" and other things on its bands. It would seem too much like kick-slapping to play "Dixie" right off. Houston waited for the proper time to have its favorite song. The proper time came when Miss Passmore, having honored the nation, honored the south.

A real southerner, you must know, feels that Dixie is a flop if it's not followed by the rebel yell. On Miss Passmore's last note it came.

Eeeeeeeeeyow-w-w-w! Yip, yip, yip. Yeeeeeow!

Since then you hear "Dixie" wherever there's a band. When there's no band and no "Dixie" you hear that rebel yell just the same. The Texans feel that they've done the manly thing and now it's time to shake off the straddles and be Texans.

CONVINCED OF ITS MERIT BY RELIEF IT HAD GIVEN HIM

"Konjola Gave Me New Health After 10 Years Suffering," He States

MR. ARNOLD C. SCHLATTER

"For ten years I have tried to find a remedy that would bring relief to my suffering, but nothing ever helped me until I started taking Konjola," said Mr. Arnold C. Schlatter, 935 Sherwood Ave., Youngstown, Ohio.

"I have been in ill-health ever since my stomach went bad. My trouble started with slight indigestion pains and gradually grew worse until I could not eat a meal without being in misery for hours afterward. I suffered with dizzy spells and headaches, which were due to constipation, and at night I was so nervous and restless that I never got more than a few hours sleep. In the morning I would feel drowsy and all out of sorts.

"Konjola gave me new health after ten years of suffering. I never have the least bit of trouble with my stomach and I am free of constipation. I sleep well at night and always feel fine in the morning. I am glad to recommend Konjola to those who suffer."

Konjola is obtained in Marion at Sperry's Pharmacy, 129 West Center-st., and in the surrounding towns at the leading druggists. Adv.

Reed-Robinson Fight for Vice Presidency in Prospect

MISSOURI LEADER APPEARS DOOMED

Smith Organization Throwing Its Support to Arkansas Senator

DOZEN SEEKING POST

Governor Donahey's Name Is Again Brought Into Elimination Proceedings

Houston, Tex., June 27—A serious contest between Senator James A. Reed of Missouri and Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, for the Democratic vice presidential nomination appeared in prospect today in event Governor Al Smith is nominated to lead the Democratic ticket.

Reed, however, appeared doomed to a double defeat, with the Smith organization throwing its support to Robinson for the vice presidency after winning the presidential nomination for the New York executive. Every known Smith leader has gone about the convention city for the last three days openly predicting the ticket would be Smith and Robinson.

Some of Senator Reed's closest friends, meanwhile, were known to be angling to win the vice presidential nomination for the Missourian. Reed thus far has refused to discuss any such ambition.

Trades Reported Sought

Despite the denial, reports emanating from Smith headquarters declared the Missourian's friends had been seeking a trade which would make the ticket "Smith and Reed."

"A dozen of Reed's generals have been around to our headquarters trying to arrange a trade," said one Smith leader. "All overtures have been rejected. Al Smith is nominated now and he will not countenance any trade anyway to win the nomination.

Robinson, meanwhile, remained almost in retirement, awaiting the hour when he will be called to the convention to become its permanent chairman. From then on, he will be the center of the picture.

Dozen Seek Post

There will be a dozen more candidates offered the convention for the second place post. If Reed should launch a vicious fight for the vice presidency and force withdrawal of Robinson's candidacy in the interests of harmony, "a dry Protestant friendly to agriculture" will be named. Upon this the Smith managers were adamant.

Such a category would bring Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, Governor Vic Donahey of Ohio, and Republican Cordell Hull of Tennessee strongly into the picture. All four could answer the Smith requirements but Barkley, coming from a border and doubtful state, might get the preference. His labor record, in addition to his active fight for farm relief legislation in the last congress, would help his cause.

Opposed to Reed

The Smith managers, controlling a clear majority of the convention, were reported opposed to Reed, chiefly because the Missouri senator has a reputation as a "wet." To put Reed on the same ticket with Smith, the New Yorker's backers felt, would hurt their cause in dry states. They also feel Reed, on his record of opposing Woodrow Wilson in the League of Nations fight, would be of little help to Smith in the "solid south."

Unless Reed himself can stop Smith or bring about the nomination of a "dark horse," it appeared today that the ticket would be Smith and Robinson, just as it did at the end of last week.

GROUP OF SENATORS WRITING PLATFORM

Ten on Committee Headed by Key Pittman of Nevada; Wagner Smith Spokesman

Houston, Tex., June 27—Again a group of senators is writing the Democratic platform.

There are no less than 10 on the platform committee, headed by Senator Key Pittman of Nevada. Senatorial colleagues not on the committee also are assisting in framing the draft.

The Wilson influence is represented by Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, who is the Ohio member.

Senator Wagner of New York, one of Governor Smith's closest friends and advisers, is spokesman on the committee for the New Yorkers. He has the support chiefly of Senators Walsh of Massachusetts, Edwards of New Jersey and Tydings of Maryland.

Three militant drys—Senators Glass of Virginia, Caraway of Arkansas and Blease of South Carolina—are leading the crusade for the bone dry plank. They are assisted by Governor Dan Moody of Texas and former Secretary of Navy Daniels.

Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, who was keynoter in 1924, is on the committee, as are also Senator Bratton of New Mexico and former Senator Stanley of Kentucky.

A similar situation prevailed at Kansas City, where a senate coterie virtually dictated the Republican platform

COMMANDER URGES EXTENSION OF HOME

U. S. W. V. Delegates Still Discussing Proposed Close; Organize Division

Chillicothe, June 27—With the delegates still discussing the proposal to close the Soldiers and Sailors' home at Xenia, the third day of the convention of the United Spanish War Veterans got under way here today.

Judge E. S. Matthias, Van Wert, department commander, late yesterday assailed the proposal to abandon the home and called for the "improvement and extension of the home."

Matthias proposed that a joint committee look into the conditions of the Xenia home. "Abandonment is not the answer to unsatisfactory conditions," the judge declared.

In his speech the judge called for cooperation between the Spanish war veterans and the American Legion.

The Ohio division of the Eighth Army Corps veterans of the Philippines, was organized yesterday with the following officers.

F. J. Pickard, Canton, president; N. M. B. Rube, Toledo, and E. E. Beckey, Cincinnati, both vice-presidents; William Stickney, Columbus, secretary-treasurer.

C. P. Moss, of Zanesville, presided at the meeting called for the organization of the division by the national commander, Maj. George S. Geis, of Detroit.

FUNERAL HELD

Society Leader Dies from Burns in Explosion

Cleveland, June 27—Funeral services for Miss Dorothy Canfield, popular in local society and granddaughter of the founder of the Canfield Oil Co., were held today in St. Anne's Catholic church, Cleveland Heights, suburb, where the deceased was to have been married in a few weeks, according to friends.

Miss Canfield was fatally burned Sunday when she attempted to light a water heater standing beside a gas tank, which exploded, in the basement of the Canfield summer home at Willobee-on-the-Lake, her father declared.

Miss Canfield died Monday morning at Lake County Memorial hospital, Painesville where she was taken with her father who suffered slight burns on his hands in attempting to smother the flames that enveloped his daughter.

SMITH FORCES WILL SEEK FARMERS' VOTE

Bernard Baruch and George N. Peek Form Alliance at Houston

Houston, Tex., June 27—Pilots of the "On to Houston" movement today visioned an approaching victory in the farm relief fight as the word went out that the Al Smith forces had decided to make a strong bid for the corn belt vote.

A wave of pessimism which swept over the bivouac of the farm chiefs yesterday was succeeded by a genuine note of enthusiasm born of contact with high chiefs in the Smith camp.

Bernard Baruch, millionaire New York banker, was said to have stepped into the breach to renew a World War partnership with George N. Peek, of Moline, Ill., chief strategist of the assembled farm group.

"I believe we will solve the problem and meet the needs of the farmer," said Baruch after a conference with Peek.

During the World War Baruch was chairman of the war industries board and Peek was a member. Despite their widely separated fields of activity they have retained a close friendship and now are endeavoring to frame an alliance which they believe may vitally affect the election.

Eight Per Cent Call Loan Rate is Anticipated by Wall Street

STOCKS CONTINUE TO SHOW SLIGHT GAINS

Industrials Halted by Increase In Money Market

BULLS CONFIDENT

High-Priced Specialties In Great Demand by Traders

BY W. S. COUSINS

New York, June 27—Though temporarily halted by the 7½ per cent call loan rate today, breaking a seven-years record in the money rate industrial stocks continued their forward price movement in a further expansion of speculative trading. The advance in call money, due partly to a artificial cause was not unexpected and in the financial district it was thought that an eight per cent rate might be set up before the turn of the month.

Reassuring statements from leading business men and industrial headed relative to business conditions in a presidential year bolstered up the courage and confidence of the bulls in the motor, steel oil and copper stocks. General Motors reached the best price and new gains and from one to five points were registered by numerous high-priced industrial and specialty stocks. Strong buying of United States Steel Common followed the new advance of that stock to above 137, a gain of five points from the low of the week. Steel common was reported to be holding better than expected.

The copper and oil stocks continued the forward movement inaugurated early in the week. Atlantic Refining's new advance to above 134 was the feature of the oils, and Anaconda carried the banner for the coppers.

The market slowed down, without yielding a reactionary trend, when the 7½ per cent call loan rate was announced shortly after the noon hour, but buying demand flowed into the market for the well known stocks, and the market promptly resumed its advance. In the late trading dullness again prevailed and the market returned to the doldrums which have ruled since the end of the last severe reaction.

SEVENTEENTH DAY NEARS END FOR NINE DANCERS

New York, June 27—Nine pairs of dancers were lurching around the arena on the seventeenth day of this vitality test. The whirl, the shuffle, the tottering walk of the past 391 hours, the most attenuated human endeavor of its kind recorded in the annals of this Jazz age, were reducing flesh and blood to primitive instincts.

Grain Market

TODAY'S REVIEW OF GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, June 27—Shorts in September corn were well hooked yesterday, and there may be more trouble for them again today. The corn market was very strong and all the other grains also made gains.

Wheat at the close was up ¾@1c; corn was up 1½@2½c; oats were unchanged to ¼c higher; rye was 1¼@1½c higher.

All the corn futures appear to be oversold, even the December. Because of the magnificent prospects for the new crop that has been sold from above 90 cents down.

With the possibility of a corn crop way over 3,000,000,000 bushels this year, selling the December looked like a simple operation for profit. Perhaps it was too simple. Good things that everybody in the world can see often turn out to be wolves in lambskins.

Wheat in Bullish Position

Wheat appears to be working into a decidedly bullish position. The danger at such a time is always the same; premature buying on bulges, followed by frightened dumping of holdings on a small break.

Wet weather where Winter wheat was being harvested, or ready to harvest, has undoubtedly had a deteriorating effect on the grain in such localities. But a return to bright weather and real Summer heat later may be a bigger bullish influence than any that has developed yet.

Such conditions foster the development of black rust. It is early for that yet, but hot weather over the Fourth of July and the week following would probably bring reports of its development in Manitoba.

In that province rust is always present. The whole danger lies in its rapid development there and spread into other provinces. The Canadian spring wheat crop as a whole has such brilliant prospects that the chances are against its coming through up to the present promise.

Market Looks Sold Out

The wheat market appears to be pretty well sold out. It has been a difficult market for longs to hang on during the last week or ten days. It is notable that on breaks it gets support.

Hedging pressure may hold it back for a while and make the fluctuations erratic, but the time for selling wheat for a long pull may have passed until after more is known of the spring wheat possibilities.

Rye appears to be in a very strong position. That market does not do much because it is narrow, and there is little trade in it at present. Very little buying might start it up sharply and a good advance would probably be followed by a considerable increase in trade.

The rye market is not easy to get into or out of advantageously. This is so well known that traders have the tendency to keep away from it. The man who buys it or sells it must be prepared to stick for some time. But it is the narrowness of the market that makes possible big moves in either direction.

In the cash market wheat was steady; corn was unchanged to 1½c off; oats were steady; rye was dull; barley was steady to 1c higher.

CHICAGO HAS WILD NIGHT OF GUNPLAY

Police Busy Following Death of Dozen Men in Gang Warfare

Chicago, June 27—Today was one of the busiest days in a decade for Chicago police following a wild night of crime during which half a dozen men were killed or seriously wounded.

The high light of the night's gunplay was the assassination of "Big Tim" Murphy, politician and racketeer, who was slain by gangsters on the lawn of his North Shore home.

Other shootings that kept the entire police department on the jump were these:

Robert Weiss a West Park policeman, was shot from his motorcycle by one of a group of men in a speeding automobile, pursued by Weiss. The officer was shot through the right arm and further injured in the crash from his motorcycle.

The speeders escaped.

The body of a man believed to be a slain gangster was found early today in a clump of bushes near Broadview. Policeman Frederick McAlister made the discovery. The man, unidentified, apparently had been "taken for a ride." His body was bullet pierced.

A man identified as Nicholas Maner, 35, was shot and killed by an unknown assailant during an argument over a woman.

Out in Cicero, western suburb, two persons were shot when police tried to quell a riot of 200 citizens bent on tearing up the newly laid tracks of the Chicago Belt Line Railroad. The mob of citizens objected to an extension of the railroad through their neighborhood.

A PAVEMENT

without a brick surface is like a tooth having no enamel

A BRICK surface is needed to complete the paving job. Brick, toughest, densest road material man makes, gives needed protection from traffic wear.

Being vitrified, brick is waterproof. That is important. Bound with asphalt it keeps moisture out of pavement; prevents costly damage and destruction.

By thus preserving the life of the softer pavement base, brick surface saves far more than its small cost.

In appearance brick surfaced pavements lend distinction to property. Laid to modern specifications they are smooth-riding; safe; easy on the eyes. Also they are by far the cheapest pavement in the end.

INSPECT NINE SITES HERE FOR AIRPORT

City Council and Junior Chamber of Commerce Committees Make Survey

actual field may be reduced providing the surrounding territory is of such a nature as to make the field easily accessible at all directions from the air. The absence of buildings, wood lots, high smoke stacks, and telephone poles in the territory surrounding the field adds greatly to the adaptability of a plot for aviation purposes.

To Work Out Details

All these factors were considered by councilmen and the airport committee members. They were also responsible for eliminating, temporarily, at least, a number of sites.

Preliminary work in connection with the selection of a field is thought to have been practically ended with the tour this morning. Working out of details and the final selection of a field, which will very likely be one of the nine visited this morning, is the next step toward obtaining an airport for the city, according to those who composed the inspection party.

The tour this morning followed the presentation of the Junior Chamber's airport plans to the city council Monday night.

The tracts inspected this morning follow:

The Uncapher tract, 63 acres, southwest of the Harding Memorial; Frank Barks farm, 107 acres, opposite the Marion County Children's home; the Stella Craner farm, 110 acres, east of Pleasant Acres; the Waite farm, 55 acres, east of Marion; the Carhart farm, 62 acres, north of Fairground street; the Dallas farm, 87 acres, north of Fairground street; the Rosen farm, 100 acres, north of Fairground street; the Berringer and Montgomery tracts, 65 acres, east and north of the Marion County fairgrounds; the Lippencott tract, 30 acres, on North Main street; and the F. E. Coons farm tracts, 107 and 100 acres, on the Upper Sandusky pike.

the Mahaffey home several nights ago when Quigley was a visitor there. Some one also removed connections from Quigley's car making it necessary for him to obtain the services of a repairman before he could start the machine.

Upon their return home last night, the blinds in the living room had been pulled down to the bottom of the window which is only a foot or so from the floor, Mrs. Mahaffey said. One side o fthe blind gaped out from the window a short distance, however, and it is believed it was through this space that the assailant saw Quigley.

All of the shots were fired through the lower righthand corner of the window and a groove plowed through the bottom of the frame, showed that whoever fired the shots stood at an angle with the window.

Mahaffey made no statement when arrested and had not been questioned yet this afternoon.

Quigley, hospitals attaches said, will recover.

TELLS OF DEATH

Motor Mechanic Buried By Nobile and Crew

Rome, June 27—In an official communique to the Italian government, Gen. Umberto Nobile, the commander of the ill-fated dirigible Italia who is now safely aboard the Citta di Milano, today revealed for the first time that Vincenzo Pomella, chief motor mechanic of the airship, was instantly killed when the craft crashed to the ice on the morning of May 25.

Pomella's body was later recovered by other members of the Italia's crew, Nobile said, and buried with appropriate honors.

Nobile also stated that when the gas bag of the dirigible floated away with six men aboard following the crash of the gondola, a column of smoke appeared on the spot on the horizon where it was last seen, about 10 kilometers away from the scene of the crash.

Carried Food Supplies

Nobile believes that the search for these six men should be concentrated about the towering cone of ice behind which the bag disappeared from view.

Nobile further added that the Swedish Professor Malmgren, and the Italian Navy Commanders Zappi and Mariano, who left his party to trek across the ice for aid, had 40 days' food supply with them and maps and instruments with which to determine their position. When last heard from, they were covering five kilometers a day. Malmgren started on his journey despite the fact that he had little hope that he and his companions would get through safely, Nobile said.

AWAIT REPORTS

Believe Amundsen On Ice-Floes Southeast of Spitzbergen

London, June 27—While several relief expeditions continued their search of the Arctic wastes for Capt. Roald Amundsen, confirmation was eagerly awaited today of the report received at Copenhagen that the noted explorer had been seen by a seal hunter on an ice-floe, southeast of Spitzbergen.

According to the report, relayed from Copenhagen by the Exchange Telegraph Co., Peter Freuchen, the Danish explorer, who is now at Murmansk, was informed of the seal-hunters' story by the crew of a fishing boat which met him.

The seal hunter told the fishing craft's crew that he saw Amundsen, Maj. Rene Guilbaud, Lief Dietrichsen and the other members of the crew of their French plane, attempting to repair the machine on the ice-floe.

Woman Lumber Promoter Claims Homes Should Be Built and Furnished According to the Desires of Housewives

BY FRANCES JENNINGS
Star Staff Writer

If "woman's place is in the home," and men like to believe it is, should not the home be built and furnished according to woman's standards of beauty and utility?

Mrs. Marion Teal of Grand Rapids, Mich., a professional woman with the background of a housewife and mother, claims that homes would be happier were more men aware of the fact that it is the "little things in life" that make a woman happy—a kitchen window cut in the right place—a convenient kitchen sink—or perhaps a dainty garden.

"Women spend 90 per cent of their time in the home," Mrs. Teal says, "and it is only fair that they are given a 90 per cent privilege in selecting that home and its furnishings. Were women given free range in selecting a home to conform to their ideas of beauty and convenience, men would find their homes not only more suitably equipped, but their wives more contented after the day's work, and what is quite as important, their bill in nine cases out of 10 would be far less."

Interested in Quality

"Women are born buyers," Mrs. Teal claims, "they select their wants with the keen eye for beauty and shrewd economy seldom found in a member of the masculine sex.

While a few years ago the main consideration of the American was price, today he is primarily interested in quality, Mrs. Teal believes. "It is to women—women with a fine sense of values and as keen a sense of quality that American manufacturers are catering in the production of their wares today. Women buyers have created a quality market.

"There are just two faults to be found in the builder and home furnisher today," Mrs. Teal says. "In the first place he exercises poor taste in building and completely equipping his home all at once. He fails to realize that each article of his home should be selected with care when the need or desire for it has become imperative—and not simply because it is something to be found in the majority of homes. Secondly he is afraid to exercise his individuality in building and furnishing his home. The buyer doesn't understand that his neighbor's needs in a home are not necessarily his and that the attractive home is the unusual one. The convenient, homelike house is one in which each article has been chosen with care and with an eye for beauty."

Keep Abreast of Times

"In furnishing a home one must also realize," Mrs. Teal continues, "that it is almost impossible to equip a home with any idea of permanancy. For satisfaction one must keep abreast of the times in color and style for homes as well as for dress. One would not wear the bustle of grandmother's day and for the same reason would not tolerate the be-ruffled sofa that was the pride of grandmother's living room.

"In short, when buying and furnishing a home follow just the simple rules, permit its prospective housewife to exercise her voice in the matter, build with regard to quality rather than price, do not attempt to completely furnish it at once and air your own individuality in the selection rather than that of your friend or neighbor."

Mrs. Teal is perhaps the only woman in the U. S. in a position to narrate the needs of the modern home. As a representative of the promotion field of the American Lumber Industry she has made an extensive study of the modern home and its equipment.

Representing the Ohio Retail Lumber Dealers association she is in Marion at the present time with the free lumber show being held at 151 East Center st. The display is being held here as the beginning of a nation-wide plan for promoting educational interest in the modern home. Lumber associations of America are combining with American paint manufacturing companies in the project.

CONVENTION OPENS FOR SECOND SESSION

Hall Jammed as Bowers' Gavel Brings Crowd to Order

state; John W. Davis, the 1924 nominee; Senator Peter Gerry of Rhode Island, who married Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt; "Cy" Cummings, the big Marylander from Washington, and George W. Olvany, the Tammany leader, were among those about the Smith generalissimo.

Roosevelt was smiling and confident. He sees in this convention the successful culmination of eight years of effort. When he stands on the platform, probably tonight, and places the name of the New York governor before the convention he knows that this time it's going to "take."

Just before the convention opened word reached the platform that the Oklahoma delegation, which has been the bone of contention between the Smith and Reed forces, had caucused and decided to vote 10½ for Reed and 9½ for Smith on the first ballot.

It was 11:45 o'clock before Bowers' gavel fell a-banging. At this time the hall was jammed, packed and perspiring profusely. Sixteen thousand people even in a hall as big as Sam Houston's aren't conducive to refrigerating the atmosphere.

The Rev. Curtis Gilmore pronounced the invocation. He prayed for prosperity, for wisdom in the decision of great issues, for co-operation and for human brotherhood.

William W. Durbin of Ohio was recognized as the chairman of the committee on permanent organization, and he proposed the election of Senator Robinson as permanent chairman. There was a chorus of approval, and when the question was put a few minutes later it went over with a whoop and unanimously. The reception which the burly Arkansans got from the crowd indicated pretty clearly that he is a popular man.

Cheer for Robinson

The committee, on which were Howard Bruce of Maryland, Mayor J. C. Dahlman of Omaha, and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson of New York, escorted Senator Robinson to the platform, and the convention gave him a rousing and rising cheer.

Robinson took over the gavel, for which most of the delegates gave thanks for, as with an experienced legislator and parliamentarian in the chair, they expected the convention to click a little faster hereafter.

Senator Robinson was attired in a linen suit, a black bow tie. He loomed large and powerful on the platform, standing four square to the crowd and driving his points home with fist to palm as he swung into his speech. They listened to him closely. His booming voice carried to the furthermost limits of the hall, in contrast to some of those who had preceded him on the platform.

The party leaders chose to dwell upon the real opening of the convention and the keynote speech of Claude G. Bowers—a speech which brought 1,100 delegates to their feet time and again with vociferous applause as the main theme which Bowers thundered at them. That theme was "throw the rascals out."

Taste of Platform

The keynoter didn't mention prohibition, candidates or any of the controversies that may possibly beset and perplex this gathering of Democrats. He hammered hard and he hammered exclusively on the contention that the Republican administrations of Harding and Coolidge have been corrupt and that the principal issue in the approaching campaign is "privilege and pillage." On that issue, the keynoter contended, all Democrats can unite. His speech in its entirety was a plea for harmony.

The excoriation which the keynoter gave to the administration's agrarian policy, together with the convention's demonstration of approval, afforded a demonstration of what may be expected in the Democratic platform.

Meanwhile, the nomination of Governor Smith either on the first or second ballots and the selection of Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas as a running mate, was considered by party leaders to be in "the bag."

Robinson's nomination was not in the same category of inevitability, but the Smith people have given him the "OK" and his senatorial colleagues on the scene here, who largely dominate their respective delegations, were working industriously for him.

Delegate Uses Whistle and Radio to Report to Wife

HOUSTON, June 27 — There's one delegate to the Democratic national convention who reports regularly each day to his wife away back in the small hamlet of Wheatland, Monroe County, New York.

And he does it by radio, but without the knowledge or approval of the radio officials.

When William C. Page left Wheatland to journey south to the convention he tucked a police Whistle in his pocket telling Mrs. Page to listen carefully on the radio each day for three or four sharp blasts of the whistle.

Ever since the convention opened the delegates and spectators have been mystified when every little while a sharp whistle could be heard above the tumult and noise. Everyone thought the whistle was the signal for something, but nothing happened.

Today the mystery was solved. Mr. Page was merely reporting to Mrs. Page.

Arkansas Senator Pleads with Democrats Not to Repeat 1924 Blunder

United States and now seeks again to deceive them with new false promises. The only specific measure for farm relief pledged by the Kansas City convention is increased tariff duties which experience shows cannot be effective.

"The economic equality of agriculture with other industries may be promoted by reducing the tariff on manufactured articles consumed by the farmers; by a system of export debentures; or by the adoption of the principle of the McNary-Haugen bill.

"This convention should invite support from the farmers by adherence to these principles."

Attacks G. O. P. Prosperity

Republican claims to prosperity he characterized as "stupid and audacious," and in support of his contention he recited a long list of bank failures, or depressions in individual industries, of the plight of the agriculturists, and then compared the record with that of the Wilson administration.

But it was on prohibition that he dwelt most. There appeared, he asserted, no prospect of repealing the Eighteenth amendment "for many years." That being the case, he argued that it would be futile for the Democrats here assembled to incorporate a wet plank in the platform, when by so doing they might "drive out of the party many who favor prohibition and are unwilling to yield their views."

Peace on prohibition, and a united attack on the Republican record of fraud and corruption during the past seven years was his advice to the convention assembled.

TALKS AT MEET

Lumber Representative Appears Before Real Estate Board

The 13 cardinal principals of home construction, formed the basis of a talk by J. W. Paddock, field representative of the Southern Pine Co., New Orleans, before the members of the Marion Real Estate board at their meeting at Hotel Harding yesterday.

Mr. Paddock, who is representing his company at the Lumber show here this week, emphasized the importance of certified lumber in home construction. Contractors should be made to certify the lumber they use, the speaker declared, it will assure better homes at no more cost and better satisfied owners. The speaker also touched on the frequent statement that the country will soon see the end of forests. This danger, he said, is remote, he pointed out, since the larger lumber companies are planting two and three trees where one is removed.

Riot of Rice Hotel is Transferred to Convention Hall; is Better for Melees

Takes at Least Four Years To Recover from Session Is Claim

By ROLAND KREBS
Star Staff Correspondent

SAM HOUSTON HALL, Houston, Tex., June 27—The riot of the Rice hotel lobby and elevators was transferred today to Sam Houston hall.

That's fine. This auditorium is a splendid site for rioting purposes.

Like the state of Texas itself, the hall is big. It's big enough to accommodate a Yale-Harvard game, a Tunney-Dempsey match and even my creditors.

One big thing lacking in trolley cars. It's half a day's walk from one end of the building to the other.

Houston, after getting this convention, put this gigantic structure up in 61 days.

One nervous delegate said he hoped they did a good job because it was no trick for a building put up in 61 days to tumble down in one.

* * *

One of the best features of the meeting place is its ventilation. The four walls are nearly all windows and a great part of the roof is latticed.

Anyone who has fought his way through the lobby of the Rice and up to but not into the elevators for two days needs the breeze that comes through these walls. The situation today in the Rice had reached a stage where the sobbing elevator girls were wanting to quit after every other ascension.

* * *

Guests no longer call it the lobby. It's the bakery.

The fellow who fired four shots through an elevator door last night because none of the cars would stop still has the whole town talking. Even after he fired the car didn't stop. If he had, every guest would have bought a gun.

* * *

Acting upon the advice of the pure water engineers that the old oaken bucket is full of sentiment and microbes, the convention arrangements committee made history by installing individual electric refrigerating machinery under the hood of the hundreds of gurgling fountains scattered about the under fringe of the auditorium.

* * *

Half an hour before the convention met, two-thirds of the delegates were in the hall. Most of them showed the effects of that terrible session four years ago in Madison Square Garden—aching dogs, sleepy eyes, tired backs.

* * *

"Politics is terrible," one delegate sighed. "It takes at least four years to recover from a convention. Here I was just getting caught up on my sleep and getting back my strength and now we have to go through it all over again.

* * *

The Democrats are not stingy with music. They have three bands in the hall. When one finishes another starts off.

* * *

They've been playing songs in honor of the different delegations. That gives Dixie all the breaks.

DECISION AWAITED

Merger Plans of Dodge and Chrysler at Standstill

New York, June 27—Plans for the giant automotive merger of Dodge Brothers, Inc., and the Chrysler Corporation stand suspended today. Decision is awaited in the action brought by minority stockholders of the former company for an injunction permanently restraining the combine.

While Supreme Court Justice George Mullen heard arguments yesterday, he suggested that the question might be one for the Maryland courts to determine since the Dodge company is a Maryland corporation.

Henry P. Holthusen, counsel for Colonel Calvin N. Goddard, who seeks to have a temporary injunction granted him against the merger made permanent, contended that the merger plan was "an appeal to speculative cupidity in exciting anticipation of an increase in dividends of the Chrysler corporation." The plaintiff alleged that the merger was "essential unlawful."

Bowers Slashes Republicans, Appeals for Democratic Unity

RINGING CALL TO ARMS IS SOUNDED

Keynote Speaker Calls on Party "To Throw the Rascals Out"

ASSAILS ADMINISTRATION

Asserts Democracy Has Mobilized to Wage War Against Privilege and Pillage

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Sam Houston Hall, Houston, Tex., June 27—A ringing call to arms for the enlistment of all Democrats in a great battle to "throw the rascals out" was sounded here last night by Claude G. Bowers in his keynote speech opening the Democratic national convention.

It was accompanid by a slashing, stinging, savage attack on the Harding-Coolidge Republican administration of the last eight years—an indictment that for sheer severity of tone and brilliancy of expression probably has had few equals in the hstory of American political conventions.

"Plunderers," "pillagers," "corruptionists," "criminals," "autocrats," "bureaucrats," "thieves" and "rascals"—these were but a few of the terms used by the New York editor in describing the kind of governmental leadership the nation has had under two Republican administrations. He lashed them by innuendo and he scourged them by name.

His first sentence was a clarion challenge: "The American democracy has mobilized today to wage a war of extermination against privilege and pillage."

Appeals for Unity

His last sentence was an appeal for Democratic unity in the great undertaking: "The predatory forces before us seek a triumph for the sake of sacking. Their shock troops are the black horse cavalry whose hoofbeats have made hideous music on Pennsylvania-av., for the last eight years. In the presence of such a foe 'he who dallies is a dastard and he who doubts is damned.' In this connection we close debate and grasp the sword. The time has come. The battle hour has struck. Thou to your tents, O, Israel."

Bowers clearly marked out for the Democrats the path they are to follow in the oncoming presidential battle "Throw the rascals out."

In the face of the oil scandals, the veterans' bureau scandals," the most shameless carnival of corruption that has ever blackened the reputation of a decent self-respecting people"; in the "parking of commissions"; in the face of "invisible government for privilege" on every hand, "in the contemptuous looting of the farmer"—in the face of all this, and more, he asserted, the duty of the democracy becomes crystal clear to sink its own differences and petty quarrels and "throw the rascals out."

"Names Names"

Bowers did not confine his attack to those Republican officials whose acts have brought them up against the courts on criminal charges. He went after the leaders of the Harding-Coolidge administration from the highest to the lowest and he named names in the process.

"Shameful as these (scandals) are," he asserted, "more shameful far has been the silence and indifference of the high functionaries of state to whom the people had a right to look for protection of the nation's property and the nation's honor. We submit in no spirit of political flubdubbery that it is a shocking thing that we have waited tainly for seven years for one word, one syllable, one whisper of the mildest criticism of these crimes and criminals to come from a single representative of the administration.

"They heard LaFollette's denunciation of the Teapot Dome—and were silent. They saw the various processes in the alienation of the nation's property—and were silent. They heard the gossip of the capital that buzzed for weeks and months—and were silent. There was not a man among them with enough will power, or lung power, to blow a police whistle.

Cites Hard Deal

"Sometimes silence is golden—for the thief."

Why, he demanded, were the leaders of the administration silent, and he answered his own question thus:

"Because of the organization of the party men was a beneficiary of the crime."

"We see," he went on ironically, "the erstwhile chairman of the national committee of the regime in power laying aside his duties as an elder in the church to slink into the office of Sinclair to get the tainted bonds. We see Him sneaking about like a receiver of stolen goods to men of means to persuade them dishonestly to contribute these to the party fund under cover.

"We see him sending a portion of these bonds to the dictator of the administration, affectionately known as 'Andy', and thus we know that the high functionaries of the state knew that the party was to be made a beneficiary of the crime.

"And thus the campaign debts of the regime in power have been paid by Harry Sinclair, and now with pious platitudes, it enters another campaign free from debt—because there was a Teapot Dome."

As for the Democrats, Bowers declared, "we put no legislation on the auction block. No Harry Sinclair has paid our debts. We are free. We unfurl the Jeffersonian banner: "A good government is an honest government," and we invite all enemies of corruption to fight with us beneath its folds for the redemption of the violated honor of the republic."

Back to Fundamentals

The conflict between the Republicans and Democrats this year, Bowers declared, goes back to the very fundamentals of government—the question of whether the Hamiltonian philosophy "government for wealth and privilege" or the Jeffersonian concept of "equal rights" shall prevail for the next four years.

It was in this connection that he dwelt upon the controversial question of agricultural relief. He asserted that for eight years "big business" as represented by highly protected corporations had profited enormously while unprotected agriculture had languished and sickened.

"Thus," he said, "while the little group represented by Mr. Mellon has found fine plucking in the vineyard of the state, there has been nothing left but thorns and thistles for the tillers of the soil."

He declared there has been a thirty billion dollar depreciation in the value of farm property in the last eight years, and "two million farmers have been driven from the paternal acres within the year.

"The result is a condition of ruination that is a disgrace to our civilization."

No More a Tourmat

"When business profits from legislation," he asserted, it is described as "patriotic statesmanship"; when the farmer demands his share "they denounce him as a radical and a crank."

"One day the head of the state by a scratch of the pen increased the tariff loot of the pig iron industry by 50 per cent, and the next day he delivered a homily to the farmers on the wickedness of expecting profit from a governmental act."

The Democrats, he said, "do not ask paternalistic privilege for the farmer but we do demand that the hand of privilege be taken from the farmers' pockets and off the farmers' throats, we do not propose that the most basic of all our industries shall longer be a door-mat for all the others to wipe their feet on as they enter the "temple of privilege."

Of prohibition, Bowers was silent. Save for a laudation of the Jeffersonian doctrine of state's rights, there was nothing in his epochal speech that referred even indirectly to this most controversial problem here at Houston.

His speech was a classic of attack, a masterpeice of invective and assault on the party in power, and with it always the fervent plea to Democrats not to quarrel, not to fight, but to unite against the common foe.

To Play Compositions

Compositions by French and German masters will be presented by the Slumber Music string sextet in a program to be broadcast through the National Broadcasting System at 10 o'clock Thursday night.

The French composers represented will be Massenet, Rameau, Saint-Saens and Debussy, with Beethoven and Schubert on the Teutonic side. The overture to Massenet's tragic opera, "Phedre," will open the program, and a gentle song, "Who Is Sylvia?" by Schubert will be the closing selection.

A group of sentimental songs will be sung by a quartet during the Michelin Hour to be heard at 9 o'clock over the National Broadcasting System.

The quartet will open and close the program with "Breezing Along With the Breeze," and will also sing "Goodby, My Lady Love" and "When You're With Somebody Else."

Willard Robison, tenor and composer, will sing a group of his own compositions as the guest of the Maxwell House Hour to be broadcast over the National Broadcasting System at 8 o'clock.

Robison is a pianist having at one time played in Paul Whiteman's orchestra. He also directs an orchestra of his own and is well known as a night club entertainer.

The River Choristers, a male octet, will present a program over the National Broadcasting System at 8 o'clock. Many popular southern numbers will be heard during this half-hour program.

Invention of Marion Man Might Have Aided Nobile

A recent invention of a Marion man, a life-saving device for the original use of ships in distress on the ocean, might have hastened the rescue of General Nobile and his companions from the icy floes of the Arctic Ocean where they were forced to land in an attempt to fly to the north pole, several weeks ago.

The device, invention of H. P. Silverthorne, of 232 S. Vine-st is a collapsible kite by which in its original use, a line was carried from a ship in distress to another ship or to shore where a rescue could made.

Nobile's rescue could have been made in short time if he had equipped himself with the invention before starting the flight, Silverthorne believes. Through the use of the kite he could have attracted the attention of rescue planes which failed to find him for several days, although flying in the immediate vicinity of his camp on the ice floe.

Smoke Signal

By his plan, which he claims has already proven successful, a smoke signal can be sent up the string to the kite attached to a smaller kite on a trolley. This method he claims would have attracted the attention of the passing planes and could have speeded up the rescue.

The trolley to which the smoke signal can be attached and which is sent up the string by the means of a smaller kite, or a parachute, is automatically controlled and returns to the sender after it reaches the kite.

The kite can be raised in the air from 100 to 2000 feet, the Marion inventor says. Silverthorne has devised a collapsible sail so that in aiding a ship in distress, a rope can be sent up the string by the parachute. When it reaches the kite the rope is released, the sail carrying it to the point of rescue.

Silverthorne believes that the kite would be a great aid to Amundsen who is now reported lost in the Arctic region, in revealing his location to rescue parties.

Ritzy Rosalie

Although this is not the fabled hickory tree, it has a very obliging limb and Rosalie is making good use of it. Nothing was said to her about not going near the water and she just must try out her new swimming ensemble. When she discards her skirt the rest of her bathing suit will be revealed. The top serves in lieu of a blouse beneath her coat and a gay belt attaches it to her bright hued shorts.

SMITH VICTOR IN CREDENTIALS FIGHT

Thirty-five Contested Seats Given Delegates Supporting New Yorker

Houston, Tex., June 27—The "brown derby steam roller" from the sidewalks of New York rolled out a complete victory for the Smith forces today in the credentials committee of the Democratic national convention.

Thirty-five contested seats were at issue. In every case, with delegates were seated by the committee.

Smith men organized the committee at the beginning of the five-hour session which ended just before daybreak this morning. They put Bruce Kramer of Montana, an ardent Smith worker in the pre-convention campaign, in the chair and then permitted the contestants to present their cases virtually without limitation. When the crucial vote was taken at 3 a. m., on Louisiana's 20 contested votes, the count stood 42 to 7.

The anti-Smith coalition which had thrown its influence with the contestants from Louisiana were somewhat deflated by the count and postponed until later their final decision on whether they would submit a minority report on Louisiana to the full convention. They had expected at least 10 votes in the credentials committee and had hopes of 15 supporting votes on the convention floor.

France Is Worried.

No matter what of benefit they may have worked to their own lands, there is no escaping the fact that the dictators over there have done little to soothe the nerves of Europe, which are always more or less jumpy. Mussolini especially has been a thorn in the side of European chancelleries. There hasn't been a half-year period since he came into power that he hasn't been a source of anxiety to some European power; first one and then another. He has been doing not a little of that which back in the days of Wilhelm was referred to as saber rattling. It is very probable that such saber rattling as he has done was largely for home consumption, but it has served to jar the nerves of European powers just the same.

Now General Primo de Rivera is putting on a little act tending to create some alarm. Word has gone out from Madrid that he has ordered the laying down of the keels of three 17,000-ton cruisers of high speed and armed with ten-inch guns. Word comes from Paris that French naval authorities are "much interested" in this "intelligence from Madrid," which means that France is suffering from another of her spells of alarm.

France is one of the signatories to the Washington naval conference agreement, by the terms of which she, like the other parties thereto, is bound not to build cruisers of a tonnage in excess of 10,000, which shall be armed with guns of not over eight-inch caliber. The plan of the Spanish dictator to construct three fast 17,000-ton cruisers armed with ten-inch guns, if carried into execution and accomplishment, will put Spain in position to drive French cruisers off the sea and yet be able to escape any battleship in the French navy, and the French do not fancy the plan.

France wants to hold naval supremacy on the Mediterranean. Italy has already manifested a tendency to question this position, and now Spain comes out with a cruiser program which further jeopardizes the position France would hold.

Possibly it would have been well had the 5-5-3 agreement been more comprehensive, had it included more powers. It was a little incident in a little Balkan power which indirectly led up to the World war, at least gave excuse for it. It is just possible that the act of some secondary power may lead up to the abrogation of the Washington agreement. Stranger things have happened.

We Pay the Freight.

Last week's Railway Age carried some interesting information concerning the average freight train of today, and made comparisons between it and the average freight train at the time the railroads of the United States were relieved from the blight of government management and control, if not from its effects.

Told in short form, the Railway Age said that the average freight train today is longer and moves at higher speed than ever before. Today it consists of forty-seven cars, whereas it had but thirty-five eight years ago, a gain in length of thirty-four per cent., and moves 12.5 miles an hour against 10.1 miles eight years ago, a gain of twenty-seven per cent. in speed. Today there are seventeen empty cars in the average train of forty-seven cars, while eight years ago only ten of the thirty-five cars in the average were unloaded, but such has been the gain in the length and speed of trains in the eight years that today the service rendered by the average train hourly is equivalent to the carrying of 9,915 tons one mile against 7,440 tons eight years ago, a gain in hourly tonnage of thirty-three per cent.

Moving at the average rate of speed of 12.5 miles an hour, the freight trains of the United States travel an average distance daily of 1,675,000 miles, which is equivalent to the daily movement of 560 average trains across the continent or seventy trains around the earth.

We have brought out the magnitude of the daily freight movement that we may call attention to the cost of the efficiency of present-day freight-handling methods.

The practice of years ago was to load freight cars and send them out without regard to the probable time of their return. They might be sent back loaded in the near future or loaded and sent on to some other destination. Sometimes a car would be gone a month, sometimes six months, sometimes a year. Some cars never came back, but were kept moving until worn out or destroyed. Under this plan there were always car shortages at crop-moving times or other times of great demand, due to the fact that cars were never where they were needed. As the result of the cooperative efforts of railroads and shippers, this situation has been corrected and today there is seldom a requisition for a car or cars that is not met. But the penalty of this is the moving of empties. Eight years ago, seventy-one per cent. of the cars in the average train were loaded. Today but sixty-four per cent. of the cars in the average train are carrying freight.

Figure what this means in the great freight movement of a day, and then of a year, and some conception may be had of what this efficiency of the railroads in having cars ready to meet the demands of shippers means from the standpoint of railway earnings and expenses. It's simply staggering.

Yet, if the facts were known, all efficiency in meeting the demands of the patrons of industry, of business, of communication of any kind, is very probably proportionally heavy. The luxuries, and advantages, and conveniences we enjoy cost money and somebody, directly or indirectly, must pay for them. And here we have basis for the view that there is little probability for any marked recession in the high cost of living. We have grown accustomed to our advantages, conveniences and luxuries. We have become wedded to them. We insist upon retaining them, and refuse to surrender them. Somebody must pay for them, and sooner or later the cost comes back to us. We finally pay the freight.

Judging by the news from up along the Brule river, President Coolidge doesn't intend to wait until next March to start that whittling job. As a matter of fact, he already seems to have inaugurated it.

Some of Senator Jim Reed's pre-primary utterances appear to have been very much like those of the distinguished gentlemen on the other side of the political fence who had so much to say about the "corn belt revolt" in that they were largely buncombe.

Germany seems to have scored over the other lands which entertained King Amanullah and his queen. In any event, a German company has secured a monopoly for importing Afghan lapis lazuli, which should far more than repay Germany for making good for the "purchases" made by the Afghan king during his somewhat embarrassing visit there.

A Washington wire says that Mr. Coolidge will not be asked to speak in the coming campaign, which strikes us as being an absolutely unnecessary waste of telegraph tolls, in the light of his announcement that he doesn't intend to take part in the campaign.

The commander of the coast guard station at Fort Niagara has been indicted as partially responsible for the shooting out of the eyes of a citizen of Niagara Falls, because the commander—a boatswain—issued orders to his subordinates to fire on all cars not stopping for liquor inspection. May we assume from this that responsibility for such orders stopped with him?

There are but two-thirds as many women delegates at Houston as there were in the big New York gathering of Democracy. Is it a case of loss of interest in politics on the part of the women folks, or a loss of respect on the part of the men folks for the influence of women in politics?

Senator Cousens is seeking to secure the quashing of service in the $500,000 slander suit by a Washington tax accountant, setting up senatorial immunity and the fact that summons was served on him between sessions of congress when senators and representatives are granted immunity from service in civil actions. In other words, he can't be sued in a civil action for utterances on the floor of the senate when congress is in session and can not be served with summons in a civil action when congress isn't in session.

SOMETHING ELSE TO WORRY ABOUT.

Common Ills Among Babies.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Among the common afflictions of infancy are frequent attacks of vomiting. One of the easiest things for an infant to do is to expel the contents of the stomach.

In the experience of the average adult, vomiting is unusual. But the healthiest of babies may suffer frequently from this symptom.

When I use the word "suffer" in this connection, I do not mean that pain is invariably present, because it isn't. As a matter of fact, the youngster throws up part of the contents of the stomach and then resumes its nursing as if nothing had happened. The act of expulsion is without effort or apparent discomfort.

Getting the child into the wrong position, or pressing on its stomach may cause vomiting. The milk or other food is returned without change.

There are a number of causes. They relate chiefly to the manner of feeding. Too rapid nursing or overfeeding—one of these is likely to be the chief cause of the disturbance. The stomach may be filled with air which has been swallowed in greedy nursing.

There is another form of vomiting that is not wholly understood. I refer to what is called "periodical" or "recurrent vomiting." Without apparent cause, severe attacks occur at quite regular periods.

Personally, I am inclined to believe that these attacks are really traceable to wrong food or to wrong feeding. Contaminated food or some temporary failure in its purity may be responsible.

Of course, there are vomiting spells which are much more serious than the mild and occasional symptoms I have mentioned. Sometimes there develops a more or less serious disturbance of the stomach.

Then we have a marked difference in the vomited material. It is changed a lot from the original food. There may be mucus, bile and even blood in the expelled substance.

In the beginning of some acute illness it is not unusual to observe a vomiting attack. Indeed that may be the very first symptom.

Worms in the intestinal tract are likely to produce so much irritation that vomiting and other symptoms follow. In such cases the intestinal waste is likely to give evidence of the presence of worms.

When vomiting occurs, further feeding should stop. A few hours without food will do no harm and will probably cause all the irritation to disappear. In more serious and continued vomiting attacks, it may be necessary to reduce the feedings or to prohibit food for a longer period. In such cases you will have a doctor, of course, and he will direct the treatment.

If the attacks of slight vomiting are frequent, you must take advice regarding the food and also the way it is given the child. Correction of some slight mistake will remove the trouble.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

M. D. S. Q—My legs and thighs are too small for the rest of the body. What would you advise?

A—Gaining weight in general will bring about results and any exercise which involves the muscles of the legs should also be helpful—running, climbing, dancing, skating, brisk walking, etc.

C. C. Q—What will remove brown moles from the face and neck?

A—Small moles may be removed by the electric needle. The X-ray, radium and dioxide snow have been successfully employed in getting rid of moles. All these methods of treatment should be applied by a physician who is expert in their use.

A. G. B. Q—What causes bald spots to appear on the scalp?

A—This is usually due to "alopecia areata." Every attention should be given to the general health. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for further particulars and repeat your question.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Twenty Years Ago.

This day was Saturday.

Marion held first position in the Ohio-State league, which it took the day before, despite the fact that the Diggers only broke even in a double-header with Mansfield. With Bailey pitching, Mansfield won the first game from Burk, eight to six, while Wilmot won for Marion in the second, shutting out the Richland county team. Marion scored seven runs off Buchols.

Marriage licenses were issued to Sophronia Eager and George W. Clutter, to Violetta Tidd and Fayette Wyckoff and to Nellie F. Whitman and Benjamin H. Thatcher.

Mrs. Roscoe Obern was very ill at her home on Orchard street.

Editorial Comment.

THE REFLECTIONS OF CO-PILOT STULTZ.

In his account of the Friendship's flight from Trepassey, Newfoundland, to Burry Port, on the coast of Wales, Co-Pilot Wilmer Stultz expresses the view that commercial air navigation across the Atlantic ocean is still far away.

The machine which Stultz flew, with another aviator and Amelia Earhart as passengers, was a Fokker of no mean size, similar in design and equipment to that in which Baron von Huenefeld, Captain Koehl and Major Fitzmaurice had crossed the Atlantic from Dublin. But the Stultz craft refused to leave the water at Trepassey with approximately 1,000 gallons of gasoline in its tanks, rising only after some 300 gallons had been dumped. Mainly for his reason, and not because of having to buck headwinds, the Friendship ran short of fuel before Southampton, her destination, was reached.

In Stultz's opinion, the manufacturers will have to build larger and more powerful planes, with greater fuel-carrying capacity, before regular ocean transportation can become feasible.

Another problem requiring solution is that of navigation. During virtually the whole of the voyage, Stultz says, the seaplane flew "blind," and this despite the fact that its instruments were functioning properly. With only a brief interval of clear weather after the start, the pilot was compelled throughout to feel his way through dense layers of fog. The machine finally reached England, but the fliers themselves were unable to guess how it happened.

Obviously, commercial flying over the ocean can not seriously be attempted on the basis of "blind" navigation. To be of any practical use, the ocean air liners of the future will have to depart on their trips with at least as much certainty of arrival at their destination as is now to be had in traveling on surface ships. The element of luck and of a pilot's instinct for direction is important, but to rely upon it alone for success in regular ocean flying would be risky.

Perhaps the triumph of the Friendship has little to teach beyond what is contained in Stultz's reflections; but even that little has its value for those interested in the advancement of transoceanic aviation.—Detroit Free Press.

WHEN TRUTH IS STRANGER THAN FICTION

"Don't worry about me, because I shall be all right. I have only gone over to the other side.

"They say only cowards commit suicide, those who are afraid of life and its trials. But I am tired of it now, and it's too late to readjust myself to my niche in the world.

"To me, life is like a merry-go-round to a boy who has only one nickel. He spends his nickel for the ride, intending to grasp the little ring as he rides, which will entitle him to another ride. He misses the ring, and also the second ride.

"My nickel was my start, the ring my opportunity to better myself in life, and I lost the satisfaction of living a life of duty to mankind, a life of which others could be proud and not ashamed.

"I had my opportunity before me and I did not grasp it. So, rather than face an empty life, with no aim and no joy, I prefer to go to another one.

"I have always wondered whence we came and whither we go, at death. I now go to find out.

"I have caused you nothing but heartaches. This one will be the last. Bye-bye."

If any novelist, great or little, were to incorporate the text of that note in a book, and attribute it to a negress who worked in a laundry, the critics would rise up as one man and denounce him for his ignorance of the commonest facts of real life.

Yet the note quoted was written by one described in the police records as "Mildred Smith, twenty-three, a negress, laundry worker, No. 645 Lenox avenue."

The Charm of a Garden.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Cultivate your own garden, as far as you have time and ability for such fine work, but in any case don't fail to enjoy its beauty and its stimulus. The pushing up of a new-born bean or pea, shoulder-ing aside the soft ground to get its first breath of air and first glimpse of the sun, is an unforgettable sight. The whole unsolved marvel of life is there. You feel that there is some sort of kinship between you and that struggling bit of animated existence, pushing up out of the soil, with motion that is actually visible with a little watching. The baby plant throws off the covering of its cradle, and its pale green face smiles in the sunshine. It feels its life, and you feel it sympathetically. Surely there is something behind the speculations of that Hindoo philosopher-botanist who avers that plants, too, are emotional; that they even have heart-beats. Is not emotion the very basis of life?

When the maker of a scientific movie exhibits on the screen the little dramas of plant birth and plant growth, he doesn't make them seem a whit less wonderful or in the least degree more suggestive of mere chemical action or physical response to stimulus. He can not rob them of the vivid impression of real life, of something superior to inanimate nature and its dead equations, which they thrust before the eyes of the watcher.

But one doesn't want to spend all the time that he gives to his garden in philosophizing. We are not all born to be Darwins or Burbanks, and one can immensely enjoy nature under cultivation without studying evolution at all. Francis Bacon, in his celebrated essay on "Gardens"—and Bacon, I fear, is far too much neglected by modern "professors of English" who use up-to-date novelists for models of style—dwells principally upon the beauty of gardens and upon the best plans for displaying their attractions and making them suitable adornments to country estates.

But the smallest country place may have its garden and be a hundred-fold more attractive for it not only to its possessors, but to all its neighbors and to passers-by. Not only the beds of flowers, but the rows of humblest vegetables draw the eyes and delight the senses. A walk in the morning through the odor-laden air of the garden gives impressions of delight that endure all day. Wise old Montaigne, the French Bacon, made some remarkable observations on the pleasures and utilities of the perfumes that nature so abundantly provides, and which are not half enough noted by most persons. He says, among other things—Florio's translation:

"Physicians might, in mine opinion, draw more use and good from odors than they do. For myself have often perceived that according unto their strength and quality they change and alter, and move my spirits and work strange effects in me; which makes me approve the common saying that the invention of incense and perfumes in churches, so ancient and so far-dispensed throughout all nations and religions, had an especial regard to rejoice, to comfort, to quicken, to rouse and to purify our senses that so we might be the apter and the readier unto contemplation."

In this respect a garden may be said to resemble a well thurified church. Its odors may awaken your spirits to more edifying thoughts. —Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

Giambattista Martini—Composer.

BY GUZETTE DOUGLASS.

Perhaps better known as "Padre Martini," this celebrated Italian musician and composer, was born in Bologna on April 24, 1706. His first instruction in music was received from his father, a violinist, who taught his son the elements of music and the violin. Later he received instruction from competent instructors, and in 1729 took the holy orders at the Franciscan Monastery at Lago.

In 1725 he had been appointed chapel master in the Church of San Francesco at Bologna, where his compositions first attracted attention.

His masses and oratorios rendered him famous throughout Europe and on the advice of friends, he opened a school of composition. Students from all countries sought his advice and he was recognized as an authority on musical science and history. Among the many who afterwards gained fame in the musical world who sought Martini's counsel, we find the names of Gluck, Mozart, and Gretry.

Padre Martini was a collector of musical literature, and his splendid library which has been estimated at over 17,000 volumes, was divided after his death between the Imperial Library at Vienna and the Liceo Rossini in Bologna.

Comparatively few of Martini's compositions have ever been published, most of them being preserved in manuscript form.

In his teaching, Martini consistently adhered to the principles of the old Roman school of composition.

He died at Bologna on October 3, or 4, 1784.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, June 27 — Several sight-seeing buses are shortly to invade the Black belt of Harlem and megaphone its wonders to wide-eyed tourists. The smoky section north of 125th street has been so richly exploited recently that it ranks with the Bowery and Chinatown as an attraction.

Out-of-towners inquire about it more and more and several for-hire hotel guides include it in their itinerary. More than half a dozen novels and plays in the past year had their locale in the Lenox avenue environs.

It has become the most talked about negro section in the world. A crop of colored writers, song-makers and playwrights have added largely to its opulence. Paul Robinson is featured in a London play. Claud McKay is writing another novel in Bolougne. Harlem's envoys are in many distant lands.

The recent passing of Florence Mills, the wistful bright-eyed little mulatto who always winged her way back to Harlem from foreign triumphs, received as much newspaper space at any demise during that year. Writers infused a new and romantic glamour to the Black belt. It was reported "hot."

Josephine Baker's Parisian popularity was something else to wag tongues about the district, for she was a product of the black and tan cafes. The play "Porgy," with an all-negro cast, lifted a tragic cripple of 125th street to stardom.

The Harlem negro business and residential district has been making strides for years, but its discovery was sudden. George Jean Nathan was first to make excursions there and write his impressions, and then Carl Van Vechten immortalized it in "Nigger Heaven."

The small sprinkling of slummers from down town became a nightly horde of whites in evening dress swarming the cafes and dance halls. Song spirituals were featured at stately Carnegie hall. Curious Black Belt slang became a part of the language. And white women acquired dark admirers.

In a night club a white-faced girl informed the head waiter a diamond bracelet of enormous value had become unclasped and lost. It was announced from the floor and a careful search of the room was made. Two hours later a cloak room attendant picked the bracelet from the chiffon flounces of another lady's dress. It had dropped and become entangled there. And the lady in whose dress it dropped was the divorced wife of the husband of the owner.

In another club a tall imperious creature swathed in chinchilla—or maybe it was nutria. I'm not up in furs—and mounted on jewelled heels came in with a crisp-looking gentleman who seemed to be there by sufferance. In fact he was, being one of those moneybags who married hastily out of the chorus. The tired drummer considerately looked the other way as they spun about on the dance floor. A few years ago he was the lady's husband.

* * *

The appeal of the night club to me is solely in the taut and electrical tension of the atmosphere. There is a feeling any sort of human drama may explode just around the corner and usually that is so. As a contrast the bored attendants are generally in some dark corner whipping off ennui by reading the true confession type of magazines dealing with "actual stories from actual life."

Man Injured in Fall From Telephone Pole at Mt. Gilead

COMPANION HURT

Cross Arms Prevent R. H. Tracey From Being Injured

(Special to Star)

Mt. Gilead, June 27—R. A. Wagner, employe of the Ohio Bell Telephone out of Columbus, was hurled from a 30 foot telephone pole here yesterday when the pole broke. He is now in Grant hospital suffering from serious injuries to his back. It was thought for some time that his back had been broken when he fell on the brick pavement.

R. H. Tracey, another member of the telephone crew, was on the pole also when it broke. His safety belt was hooked around the pole and he was unable to free himself. Fortunately the pole fell so that the cross arms near the top hit first. Tracey was immediately under the arm and escaped without injury, and in a short time resumed his work.

The pole was located at the intersection of East High st and East Center st. Dr. C. S. Jackson, local physician, was summoned and accompanied the injured man to Grant hospital in the Phillips ambulance.

It is an inconspicuous plant with a showy lavender and white flower. There were four in the group found, the first noted here in more than 20 years of rambling the woods and fields.

Cost of Record Books for Offices in Morrow County Is Approximately $41,167

Auditor's Department Contains More Records, While Treasurer's Office Has Largest Number of Additions; Commissioners Require Fewest Books

MT. GILEAD, June 27—Although Morrow County is rather small comparatively speaking, and has a none too large population, the cost of records for the county reached the startling sum of $41,167 during the life of the county to date. This is only an approximate figure and is not quoted by any county official, but it can be readily seen that the cost would run near this figure by checking over the records. This is by no means an exorbitant figure, and is probably the very minimum provided by law as to county records.

Auditor's Books Costly

The office of Auditor Roy Miller contains more records than any other office, and the books for this nature of work are more expensive than those in any other office. The estimated cost of all the books purchased for this office, some of them used jointly by the auditor and treasurer, reaches $15,840 since the beginning of the office in 1848. This includes law books, record books and miscellaneous ledgers.

The office of T. A. Campbell, clerk of courts, probably contains the next largest collection of record books. These total an estimated cost of $10,327 since the office was first opened. Some of the books represented in this are: appearance dockets, criminal dockets, common pleas journals, law records, execution dockets, cash books, criminal record, motor vehicle books and judges dockets. The cost of the books run from $7.80 to $70 each.

The recorder's office, now occupied by Laura Smith, has close to $5,000 in books which represent 80 records for deeds, and 47 mortgage records.

Probate Records $4,000

The probate office, now under Judge Ethel Elder, also has approximately $3,000 in records. These records include settlement records, administration dockets, miscellaneous dockets, marriage license records, journals, records of accounts and inventory and sale bill records. There are 11 records of wills filed in the probate court. The marriage license records total nine.

The office of County Treasurer C. G. Shambaugh has made the largest number of additions to the records since the beginning of the office. The first treasurers had but one ledger in which they kept all accounts and the number grew until the total cost has reached approximately $4,000.

The County commissioners' office required the least number of books. Their approximate value is $1,000. Lois Rule is clerk.

Bucyrus Men Notified of Forfeiture of Bond in Bank Robbery

Bucyrus, June 27—Following failure of bondsmen to produce Wilbur Hand convicted of participating in the robbing of the Galion Commercial Savings Bank and sentenced by the local court to 12 to 25 years in the Ohio State Penitentiary, H. N. Oberlander and George Rinard of this city, the bond of $25,000 was declared forfeit yesterday noon by Judge J. Walter Wright.

The sondsmen declare they are fully insured against financial loss and have since Hand's disappearance taken judgment on common pleas court against three Toledoans in the amounts of $7,000 and $5,000.

CRESTLINE AVIATOR VISITS BUCYRUS

Discusses Plans For Airport at Meeting of Rotarians; Visits Sites

Bucyrus, June 27—U. Gene Foster, Crestline aviator who is interested in establishing an airport here visited Bucyrus yesterday and spoke before the Rotary club about the needs and possibilities of obtaining an air port.

A dozen sites within the two-mile radius of Bucyrus, which are available at favorable prices, are under consideration of an aviation committee. The committee will await a Federal government aviation inspector who will come the latter part of July for advice of the most desirable spot for landing and taking off of planes.

Foster was shown seven of the fields under consideration and said four or five of them could be used to a good advantage. All that is required to start an air port," said Foster, "is around 160 acres of land, water, power, several good mechanics and a telephone with which gasoline and oil or spare parts can be obtained." He emphasized the fact that unless Bucyrus acquires an airport the city will be hopelessly out of the running within a few year.

The Bucyrus Chamber of Commerce, an interested group in this new project held a meeting last night but only routine business was transacted.

TO the strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding March," Miss Nell Mae Sampson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Sampson, S. Prospect-st, entered St. Mary's Catholic Church this morning at 8:30 o'clock to become the bride of Charles Dunn, of Kermit, W. Va., son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Dunn, Niles st. Father F. X Cotter performed the ceremony and Father Hanahan read the nuptial high mass. Palms banked the altar up to the chancel, with shasta daisies, and roses forming a background for the wedding. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was played as the recessional.

Mrs. Dunn was attended by her sister, Miss Kathryn Sampson, in a robe de style gown of green moire with puffs of pink taffeta at the sides. Her picture hat was of pink horsehair braid and her slippers were of the same shade as her gown. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and lavender.

The bride was charming in her ivory moire gown of robe de style model, with v-neckline, from which an ivory velvet bow and streamers fell to the ankle length hemline in the back. The long tulle veil was shaped in cap fashion with a coronet of orange blossoms, with orange blossom loops at the sides. Her slippers and hose were of ivory shade to match her gown. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses, valley lillies and orchids, and the ivory prayer book carried by her mother at her wedding. The pearl ornament which she wore had also been worn by her mother at her wedding, and by her sister, Mrs. D. W. Disbennett when she was married.

Eugene Dennis attended Mr. Dunn as best man. Robert O'Connor and Robert Kerrigan were ushers. The bride's gift to her maid of honor was a beautiful purse of gold and crystal steel beads.

A wedding breakfast at the home of the bride was served to 40 following the ceremony. The home was a profusion of flowers, and the small tables at which the guests were seated, were attractive with small bud vases with shell pink rose buds, and rosebud favors. A large floral piece and pink and white bridal cake centered the bride's table. Tall pink candles in silver holders, tied with bows of green tulle, were at each end of the table, and a miniature bride and bridegroom were at the bride's place. Assisting in serving the breakfast were Misses Ruth O'Connor, Isabel Fye, Alice Burke and Margaret Forry, and Ida Louise Maloney.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn left for a wedding trip through the northern United States, after which they will be at home temporarily in Bucyrus, where Mr. Dunn is engaged in business.

Mrs. Dunn wore a creme beige featherweight jersey three-piece ensemble with three-quarter length cape. A crystalline motif embroidered on the blouse added a smart note to the costume. Her hat of red silk felt, and her shoes, purse, and accessories were of lacquer red.

Mrs. Dunn is a graduate of Bowling Green State Normal College and has been a teacher in the schools at Morral. Mr. Dunn is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame.

Out-of-town guests included Miss Mary Walsh and Mrs. Beatrice Berkholder, of Cleveland, Mrs. P. J. Maloney and sons, Thomas and John, of Columbus, Mrs. Joseph Neville of Bucyrus, and Miss Zelma Howard, of Toledo.

AT 7:30 o'clock this morning Miss Kathryn Norris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Norris, Davids st., and Robert Caulfield, son of John T. Caulfield, Girard av., were united in marriage at St. Mary's Catholic Church. The ceremony was solemnized with nuptial high mass by Father F. X. Cotter.

The altar and chancel were beautifully decorated with palms and spring flowers. A frock of orchid chiffon, fashioned with long waistline, and chiffon panels draped from a wide band fitting closely at the waist, was worn by the bride. Her large picture hat was of orchid, and her arm bouquet was of Columbia roses, lillies, and showers of sweet peas.

Miss Irene Rinehart, who attended the bride, wore a gown of sea foam chiffon, and a large leghorn hat, banded in pink chiffon. Her arm bouquet was of roses, smilax, and daisies. Clarence Bowe attended Mr. Caulfield as best man.

A wedding breakfast was served at the Hotel Harding following the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Caulfield left today for an extended lake trip. Mrs. Caulfield wore a blue crepe ensemble with hat to correspond. Mr. Caulfield is a pattern maker at the Marion Steam Shovel Co. and Mrs. Caulfield has been employed as cashier for the Nobil Shoe Co.

THE HEART STORY OF A WOMAN'S AFFECTIONS

By ADELE GARRISON

Philip Veritson and Miss Lincoln Again Appear

AS Katie announced that "Meester Veritsen mit hees boy und dot Miss Lincoln, dey downstairs," I looked across at my father in quick dismay. I had promised Mother Graham that I would stay with Junior until Katherine returned, an assurance upon which my captious old mother-in-law, laden with an overweening sense of her responsibilities had insisted. And my father's words of warning concerning the personal interest of my employer in me seemed still to be floating in the air, so recently had they been uttered.

"I don't see how I can go down," I said in bewildered fashion. "Katherine won't come back, and——"

"That's where you're wrong." The little nurse's cheery voice sounded from the hall, and a second later she came out on the veranda.

"There! you see your problem is solved," my father said, and his significant look at me told me that he saw the necessity of my receiving Mr. Veritsen.

I turned to Katie whose bright eyes were going from my father's face to mine with the lively curiosity which is her greatest fault.

"Tell them I'll be right down," I directed. "Where have you put them?"

"I try haf dem go by living room," she said with a touch of exasperation in her tone. "But dey tink demselves so smart und dey say, 'Let us nice out on veranda ve stay out here.' Und I always 'fraid I tip ofer tea wagon getting eet down dot step."

"We don't serve any tea today, Katie," I assured her. "Mr. Veritsen, no doubt, has only called to inquire about Junior as all our other friends have. And the others are here every day, as you know."

"You bet your boots, I know," my little maid declared. "Dey all time underfoot. But I got to beat eet, or dey think you no vant see dem."

"She's uncanny in her timing," Katherine laughed as Katie hurried away. "She knows exactly when to 'beat it' in order to avoid a call down."

"She's incorrigible, I know," I sighed, "but——"

"Put that last word in capitals, also italics," Katherne admonished, "and visualize it whenever you're unusually exasperated at your hand-maiden. For you'll never find another so willing, so devoted and so really capable—not in this modern age."

"I know that," I agreed. "And now, will you excuse me. I must change this housedress for something a bit more formal."

"Don't take too long," Katherine admonished. "I saw the procession as it entered the house, and it was a well-laden one. I think your esteemed boss must have bought out a fruit store, also a toy shop. No doubt he'll ask to see the boy and if Junior's awake there will be no objection. But if he's asleep, the doors are barred to Lindbergh and the Prince of Wales."

"Mother!" The call came from Junior's room and Katherine put her finger to her lips.

"He hasn't heard you," she whispered. "He calls you always the first thing when he awakens. Hurry down." Then aloud she called cheerily:

"Mother will be back in a little while. She has gone to see some callers But here's your grandfather."

"Oh! Goody! Now I'll have another story," my small son's voice carolled, and I was ashamed of the tiny pang which I felt at his easy acceptance of my father as a substitute for me. I told myself scathingly as I hurried tidylessly to my room that I was a perfect instance of the person who wishes to eat and save the cake at the same time.

I wasted very little time in dressing, and a queer quixotic little feeling made me select the least becoming afternoon dress in my wardrobe, and pay scant attention to my coiffure. For my father's words of caution were ringing disturbingly in my ears as I went downstairs to greet my guests.

The Mystery at Styles

THE YEAR'S MOST BAFFLING SERIAL STORY

BY AGATHA CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 28

AND suddenly I remembered that last conversation at tea on the day of my arrival, and the gleam in her eyes as she had said that poison was a woman's weapon. How agitated she had been on that fatal Tuesday evening! Had Mrs. Inglethorp discovered something between her and Bauerstein, and threatened to tell her husband? Was it to stop that denunciation that the crime had been committed?

Then I remembered that enigmatical conversation betwene Poirot and Evelyn Howard. Was this what they had meant? Was this the monstrous possibility that Evelyn had tried not to believe?

Yes, it all fitted in.

No wonder Miss Howard had suggested "hushing it up." Now I understood that unfinished sentence of hers: "Evie herself——" And in my heart I agreed with her. Would not Mrs. Inglethorp have preferred to go unavenged rather then have such terrible disgrace fall upon the name of Cavendish?

"There's another thing," said John suddenly, and the unexpected sound of his voice made me start guiltily. "Something which makes me doubt if what you say can be true."

"What's that?" I asked, thankful that he had gone away from the subject of how the poison could have been introduced into the cocoa.

"Why, the fact that Bauerstein demanded a post-mortem. He needn't have done so. Little Wilkins would have been quite content to let it go as heart disease."

"Yes," I said doubtfully. "But we don't know. Perhaps he thought it safer in the long run. Some one might have talked afterwards. Then the home office might have ordered exhumation. The whole thing would have come out, then, and he would have been in an awkward position, for no one would have believed that a man of his reputation could have been deceived into calling it heart disease."

"Yes, that's possible," admitted John. "Still," he added, "I'm blest if I can see what his motive could have been."

I trembled.

"Look here," I said, "I may be altogether wrong. And, remember, all this is in confidence."

"Oh, of course—that goes without saying."

We had walked as we talked, and now we passed through the little gate into the garden. Voices rose near at hand, for tea was spread out under the sycamore tree as it had been on the day of my arrival.

Cynthia was back from the hospital, and I placed my chair beside her, and told her of Poirot's wish to visit the dispensary.

"Of course! I'd love him to see it. He'd better come to tea there one day. I must fix it up with him. He's such a dear little man! But he is funny. He made me take the brooch out of my tie the other day, because he said it wasn't straight."

I laughed.

"It's quite a mania with him."

"Yes, isn't it?"

We were silent for a minute or two, and then, glancing in the direction of Mary Cavendish, and dropping her voice, Cynthia said:

"Mr. Hastings."

"Yes?"

"After tea I want to talk to you."

Her glance at Mary had set me thinking. I fancied that between these two there existed very little sympathy. For the first time, it occurred to me to wonder about the girl's future. Mrs. Inglethorp had made no provision of any kind for her, but I imagined that John and Mary would probably insist on her making her home with them—at any rate until the end of the war. John, I knew, was very fond of her, and would be sorry to let her go.

John, who had gone into the house, now reappeared. His good-natured face wore an unaccustomed frown of anger.

"Confound those detectives! I can't think what they're after! They're been in every room in the house—turning things inside out, and upside down. It really is too bad! I suppose they took advantage of our all being out. I shall go for that fellow Japp, when I next see him!"

"Lot of Paul Prys," grunted Miss Howard.

Lawrence opined that they had to make a show of doing something.

Mary Cavendish said nothing.

After tea, I invited Cynthia to come for a walk, and we sauntered off into the woods together.

"Well?" I inquired, as soon as we were protected from prying eyes by the leafy screen.

With a sigh, Cynthia flung herself down, and tossed off her hat. The sunlight, piercing through the branches, turned the auburn of her hair to quivering gold.

"Mr. Hastings—you are always so kind, and you know such a lot."

It struck me at this moment that Cynthia was really a very charming girl! Much more charming than Mary, who never said things of that kind.

"Well?" I asked benignantly, as she hesitated.

"I want to ask your advice. What shall I do?"

"Do?"

"Yes. You see, Aunt Emily always told me I should be provided for. I suppose she forgot, or didn't think she was likely to die—anyway, I am not provided for! And I don't know what to do. Do you think I ought to go away from here at once?"

"Good heavens no! They don't want to part with you, I'm sure!"

Cynthia hesitated a moment, plucking up the grass with her tiny hands. Then she said: "Mrs. Cavendish does. She hates me."

"Hates you?" I cried, astonished.

Cynthia nodded.

"Yes. I don't know why, but she can't bear me; and he can't either."

"There I know you're wrong," I said warmly. "On the contrary, John is very fond of you."

"Oh, yes—John. I meant Lawrence. Not of course, that I care whether Lawrence hates me or not. Still, it's rather horrid when no one loves you, isn't it?"

"But they do, Cynthia dear," I said earnestly. "I'm sure you are mistaken. Look, there is John—and Miss Howard——"

Cynthia nodded rather gloomily. "Yes, John likes me, I think, and of course Evie, for all her gruff ways, wouldn't be unkind to a fly. But Lawrence never speaks to me if he can help it, and Mary can hardly bring herself to be civil to me. She wants Evie to stay on is begging her to, but she doesn't want me, and—and—I don't know what to do." Suddenly the poor child burst out crying.

I don't know what possessed me. Her beauty, perhaps, as she sat there, with the sunlight glinting down on her head; perhaps the sense of relief at encountering someone who so obviously could have no connection with the tragedy; perhaps honest pity for her youth and loneliness. Anyway, I leaned forward, and taking her little hand, I said awkwardly:

"Marry me, Cynthia."

Unwittingly, I had hit upon a sovereign remedy for her tears. She sat up at once, drew her hand away, and said, with some asperity:

"Don't be silly!"

I was a little annoyed.

"I'm not being silly. I am asking you to do me the honor of becoming my wife."

To my intense surprise, Cynthia burst out laughing and called me a "funny dear."

"It's perfectly sweet of you," she said, "but you know you don't want to!"

"Yes, I do. I've got——"

"Never mind what you've got. You don't really want to—and I don't either."

"Well, of course that settles it," I said stiffly. "But I don't see anything to laugh at. There's nothing funny about a proposal."

"No, indeed," said Cynthia. "Somebody might accept you next time. Good-bye, you've cheered me up very much."

And, with a final uncontrollable burst of merriment, she vanished through the trees.

Thinking of the interview, it struck me as being profoundly unsatisfactory.

It occurred to me suddenly that I would go down to the village, and look up Bauerstein. Somebody ought to be keeping an eye on the fellow. At the same time, it would be wise to allay any suspicions he might have as to his being suspected. I remembered how Poirot had relied on my diplomacy. Accordingly, I went to the little house with the "Apartments" card inserted in the window, where I knew he lodged and tapped on the door.

An old woman came and opened it. "Good afternoon," I said pleasantly. "Is Dr. Bauerstein in?"

She stared at me.

"Haven't you heard?"

"Heard what?"

"About him."

"What about him?"

"He's took."

"Took? Dead?"

"No, by the perlice."

"By the police?" I gasped. "Do you mean they've arrested him?"

"Yes, that's it, and——"

I waited to hear no more, but tore up the village to find Poirot.

A Comparison After Forty Years

FORTY YEARS of fluctuations in prices and freight rates, according to government statistics, show:

Average wholesale price of all commodities at present 90 per cent higher than in 1890.
Average wholesale price of farm products now 118 per cent higher than in 1890.
But the average revenue received by the railways for carrying each ton of freight one mile is only 14 per cent higher than in 1890.

Over periods of years, as these figures show, freight rates constantly have been becoming lower in proportion to the prices of commodities.

Revisions and reductions in freight rates are directly saving the public almost a billion dollars a year in transportation charges, while benefits of incalculable value have resulted from the increased efficiency and dependability of the service rendered.

Increased taxes, wages and other operating expenses consume 95 per cent of the increase in railway earnings that have occurred since ten years ago, and have made necessary the present level of rates.

Up to this time no regulating authority has urged any reduction in taxes or wages or other operating expenses, but some of them seem to favor a policy of restriction in the net return that Carriers may earn, without due regard to the effect this would have on the development and improvement of their plants and equipment, so as to enable them to handle the country's growing commerce in an adequately dependable way.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

I CERTAINLY do miss my squirrel these days. I told Jubilee so when we both woke up and laid looking at each other this morning. I could have a lot of fun if I had a squirrel, and twice as much fun if I had two squirrels, but I haven't got any. All I have got is a dog and short pants and a couple of cows to milk two times a day for the rest of my life, and the bunch and Younins, so I guess I am pretty lucky after all.

My ant is still mad at my grandfather, and she still sets down kina careful. My unkle told her that it was a very natural mistake for the super to make, and she said if he came to apologize and she bounced a flowerpot off his head that would be a natural mistake for her to make, and my unkle said it would be a mistake all right. He said the superintendent of a Sunday school is a servant of the Lord and if she heated him she would go to the bad place, and she rolled up her eyes and said: "Migosh have I got to associate with grandpa throughout eternity?" and then everyone laughed. My grandfather laughed too but he got red, so I guess it must of been on him.

I thought maybe Younies and Feeble would come if I didn't take the cows out to the pasture right away so I said to the bunch to less swing a while. The swing rope is tied to a couple of I-bolts that go up through the wood at the top and me and Banty got in the swing and were pumping as hard as we could when the bolts both came out and me and Banty landed on our feet and turned over a few times and rolled almost all the way to the barn.

We was so mixed up that it was lucky we could tell ourselves apart when we got up, and we were lucky we hadn't broke anything. We looked at the I-bolts and they were rusty like they hadn't had any nuts on them for a long time and I climb the swing and found the nuts where someone had toshen them off and left them. And the Last Rag of Tripe was trying to edge away when Nibs grabbed him and we tied him to the swing with the swing rope and were doing a war dance around him when my mother hollered for me to get out with the cows, so we left the Last Rag of Tripe there and didn't wait to unzip him. I know he done it. He does everything that is crooked.

We went past Younions and Feeble was up top of her house and hollered at us, and then when she went to go around the corner of the roof to get in the little window she caught her dress and had to slip out of it and climb in in her body and pants with us all hanging her, and I had to go up and get her dress. We all went to the pasture together.
